

How to group app notifications on iPhone

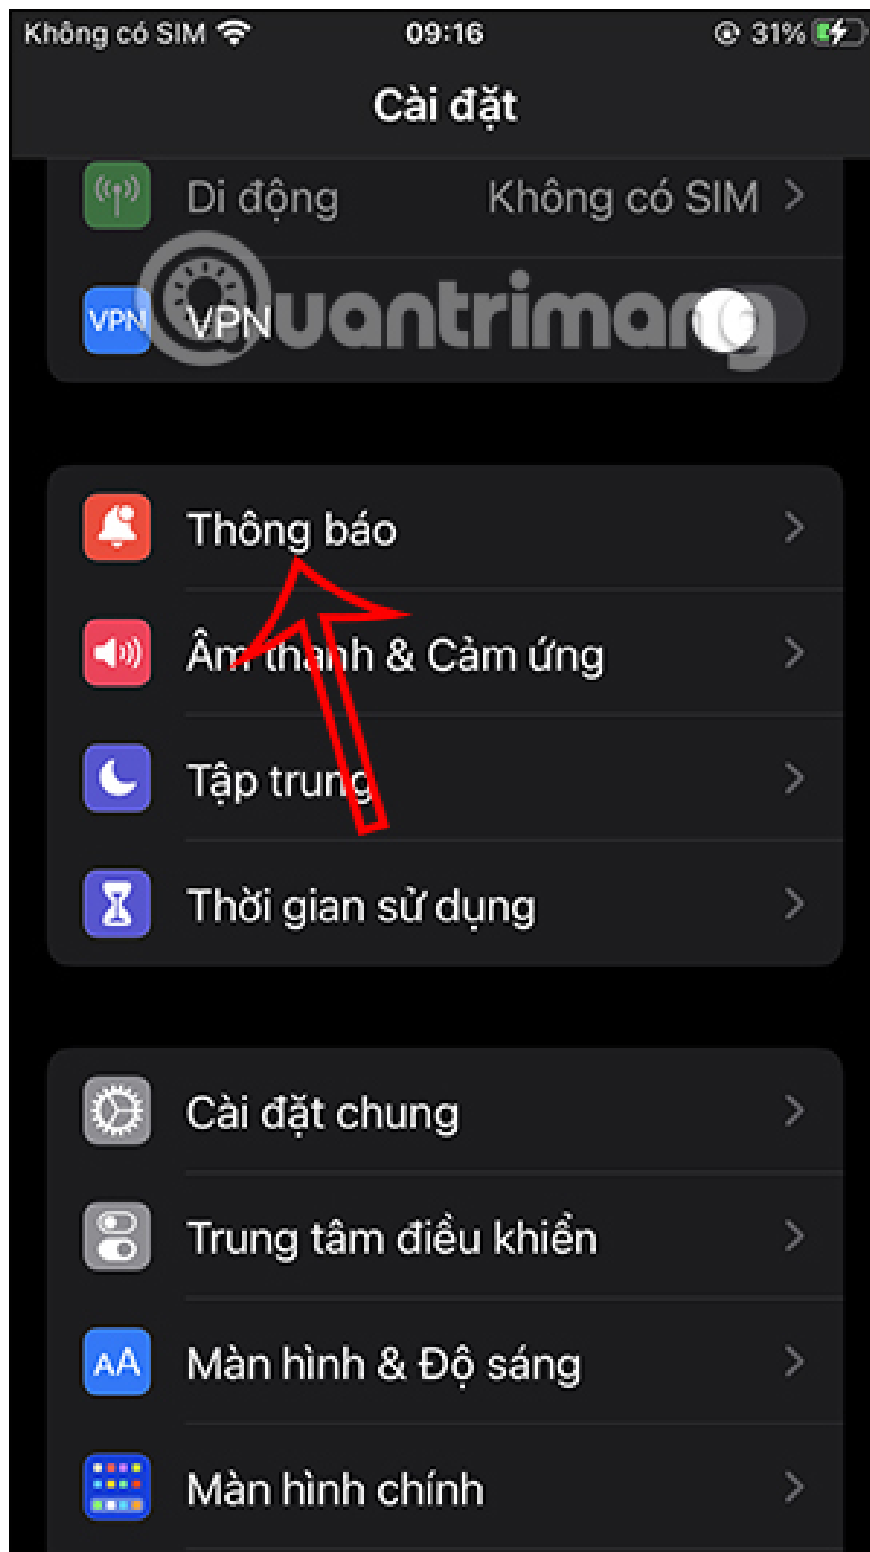

The Notification Grouping feature on iPhone will help to tidy up the notification center and lock screen instead of displaying a lot of notifications from 1 application.

The Notification Grouping feature on iPhone will help to tidy up the notification center and lock screen instead of displaying a lot of notifications from 1 application. This notification customization on iPhone is quite necessary, avoiding displaying too many notifications from an application on the screen. The notification grouping feature on iPhone has appeared since iOS 12 and in this article you will know how to enable grouping of application notifications on iPhone.

How to group app notifications on iPhone

Step 1:

First, we access the Settings section on the phone and then click on Notifications to customize notifications for applications on the iPhone.

Step 2:

Next, the user will see all the applications installed on the phone. You will click on the application whose notifications you want to adjust.

Step 3:

Now switch to the interface to adjust notifications for the application. Here we will click on the Notification Group setting to adjust. Then you will see 3 setting options for the application notification group feature on iPhone.

1. Automatic: Notifications from apps are grouped by topic and other criteria.

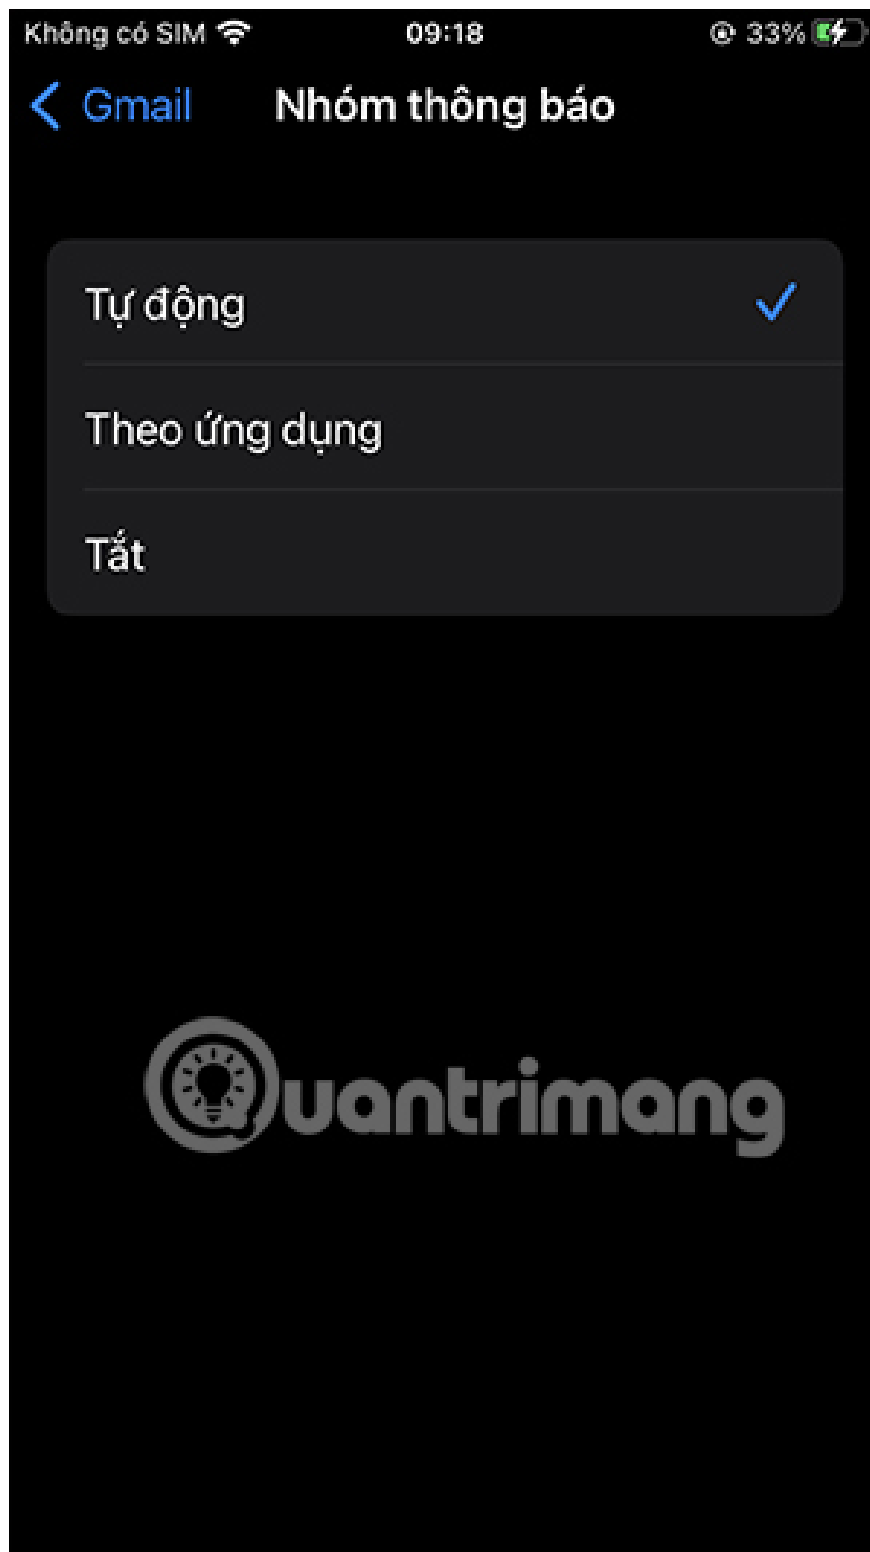

- 2. By app: All notifications from apps are grouped together.
- 3. Off: Notifications are not grouped at all.

Step 4:

Here you can choose to group application notifications automatically or by application depending on each person's application notification grouping requirements on iPhone.

After we select the application notification group type, all notifications from the application will be grouped together to display on the lock screen. When you click on the application notification, all notifications of that application will be displayed.

You finished reading the article "How to group app notifications on iPhone" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.

