Finding the motivation to clean your house depends on making the process a fun experience. A little entertainment, some friendly competition, and prizes are just a few ways you can add some fun to your cleaning experience. Making cleaning fun will give you the motivation you need to keep your home clean and organized.

Make it a workout

Turn on the music, set your smart timer, and clean up as quickly as possible. A clean house and a feeling of excitement are the perfect combination to boost your mood.

The whole family gets involved

It's more fun when you have helpers, and some help the time go by faster. Turn your cleaning list into a family competition. Divide up the room and see who finishes first, or challenge your kids to see who can complete the most cleaning tasks in half an hour. With family involvement and an exciting competition, your cleaning list will no longer feel like a chore.

Get motivated by cleaning chores you love

You may find that the key to motivating your cleaning list is to start with something you enjoy and get inspired by the accomplishment. For example, do you love vacuuming? Start there. The satisfaction of clean vacuum ducts is enough to inspire a day of cleaning and organizing.

Dancing to relieve frustration while cleaning

There's nothing like a good playlist to inspire a productive cleaning session. Put on your favorite playlist and dance to the mop or broom in your hand. There's really nothing that music can't help you accomplish.

Chat with friends

Having someone to share stories, laughs, and frustrations with will help your cleaning time go by faster. Set up a FaceTime call, catch up on Marco Polo messages, or put your buddy on speakerphone while you clean the bathroom or load the dishwasher.
