

How to quickly log out of Gmail on your computer or laptop.

Gmail is a free, private, and secure messaging service that can be used on both phones and computers/laptops. However, if you log into your Gmail account on multiple devices without proper control, it can easily lead to malicious actors accessing and using your account for nefarious purposes. Therefore, you need to know how to log out of Gmail on your computer/laptop to protect your Gmail account.

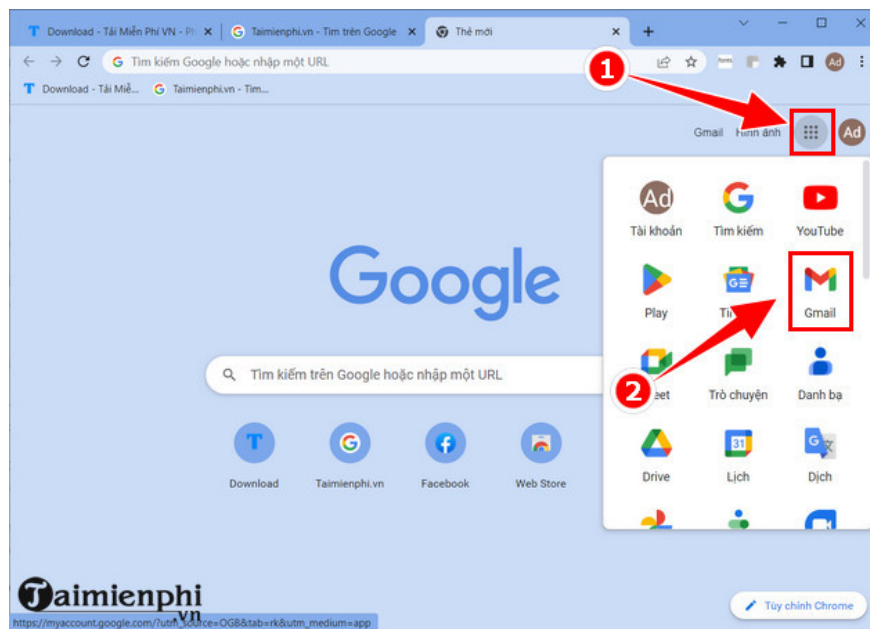

Registering and logging into Gmail is probably not unfamiliar to most people, as almost everyone now has a personal Gmail account. However, not everyone knows how to secure their Gmail account. There have been many cases where users logged into Gmail on another device and then forgot to log out, leading to their personal information being leaked or their account falling into the wrong hands.

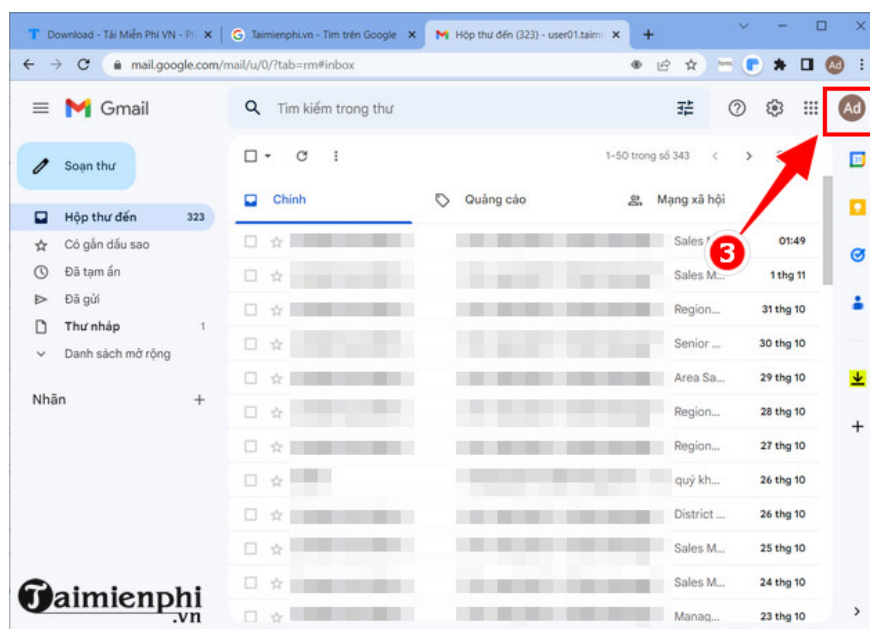

To avoid such unnecessary mistakes, the best way is to log out of your Gmail account from all sessions. And right now, Taimienphi will guide you on how to log out of Gmail on all devices remotely, no matter where those devices are located.

1. How to easily log out of Gmail

Step 1: Open Gmail in the Google Chrome browser by clicking the Menu icon => Select Gmail (as shown in the image).

Step 2: To log out of Gmail on your computer, select the Avatar icon from the main Gmail interface .

Step 3: Now select Log Out to sign out of your Gmail account on your computer.

Step 4: Results after logging out of Gmail on your computer.

2. How to log out of Gmail on all web browsers

Step 1: Access your Gmail account from your web browser.

Step 2: The Gmail account interface will appear. Scroll down to the bottom and click on " Details " .

Step 3: A dialog box displaying your Gmail account activity information will appear, containing all your previous Gmail login session information. Here, you can control login information such as IP address or browser. Click on "Show details" to view more details. If someone logs into your Gmail account from a suspicious location, Gmail will alert you, allowing you to log out of Gmail.

Step 4: Now, the important thing is to click on "Sign out all other web sessions" to completely log out of your Gmail account on all devices such as phones, tablets, computers, etc.

Step 5: Wait a moment, and you will see the message " Successfully signed out all other sessions " appear.

Therefore, your Gmail account will be logged out from most devices you've logged into but haven't logged out of yet. However, as the image above shows, if you're using the password saving feature, even if you log out of all sessions, they can still access your email (because your password is saved on that device). To completely prevent this, you'll need to change your Gmail password. You can refer to the instructions on how to change your Gmail password to create a more secure password for your account. Remember not to log into your Gmail account on too many different devices, otherwise Google might refuse to sync, as you only have a maximum of 15 simultaneous connections.

Furthermore, to enhance the security of your Gmail account, you can't overlook the two-factor authentication feature, which is trusted by many users. For detailed information and instructions on how to activate this feature, please refer to our previously shared guide on activating Gmail's two-factor authentication .

You finished reading the article "How to quickly log out of Gmail on your computer or laptop." edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.