

How to quickly turn off all tabs on the iPhone browser

Although having many tabs on the phone browser does not cause slowness or lag, experts still recommend cleaning them regularly.

Contrary to the habit of using computers where users often close tabs or browsers when using and turn off the computer, on phones, many people have the habit of leaving a lot of "tabs" while surfing. web. Imagine you are looking for a recipe, good information or a new movie, and soon from 1 tab to 4, 5 tabs are "crowded" in your browser.

This essentially has no effect on the phone's performance or battery usage because their software is optimized differently than a computer - when not in use, these tabs go into a "sleep" state and only reloads when you click. However, experts still recommend that you regularly clean up and turn off unused tabs.

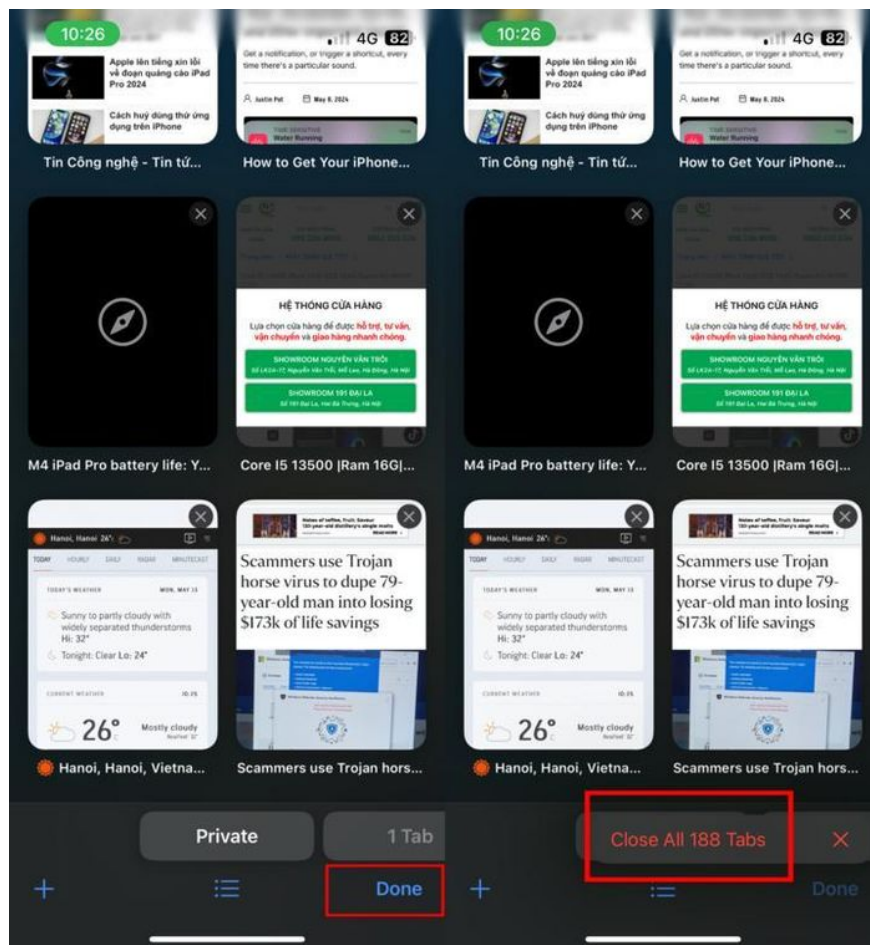

According to RD, the reason is psychological. "Hoarding" too many apps on the phone browser can cause users mental pressure. Due to the habit of constantly using phones for most of us today, digital space is somewhat similar to physical living space such as bedrooms, living rooms and leaving too much unnecessary clutter. makes the mind more confused.

RD cited several researchers in Finland about the concept of "digital clutter" at a 2023 conference on human-computer interaction, saying having multiple tabs open can cause mental pressure .

To quickly clean up all tabs on your iPhone, you can follow these steps:

On Safari

Go into the application, open the tab icon window in the lower right corner, then press and hold the Done button, then click Close All. Tabs.

On Chrome

The steps are quite similar, click the tabs window button in the lower right corner, hold down the Edit button, then select Close All Tabs.

You finished reading the article "How to quickly turn off all tabs on the iPhone browser" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.