

How to share YouTube Music over time

YouTube Music is rolling out the ability to share music and podcasts from a specific time point. This feature is similar to sharing YouTube videos with time

YouTube Music is rolling out the ability to share music and podcasts from a specific time. So instead of having your friends manually jump to a listening point, you can now create a link that starts playback right at the point you want. It's similar to sharing a YouTube video with a timestamp. Here's how to share YouTube Music music by time.

How to share YouTube Music over time

Step 1:

First, click on the YouTube Music song you want to share, then at the time of the song you want to send to the other person, click on the Share button below to proceed to share this song.

Step 2:

In the sharing mode customization interface, you will see the Start at xx:xx setting for us to activate , with the time mark being shared.

When someone taps the shared link, the music or podcast will start playing from that moment.

This feature makes it easy to share your favorite part of a song with loved ones without having to send them a private message reminding them to start listening at a specific time. It also lets you share a specific part of a podcast directly, which is especially useful since podcasts tend to be long, saving the other person from having to tune in on their own.

You finished reading the article "How to share YouTube Music over time" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.