People who need to go for a simpler solution can try this app as there is no need to root or jailbreak the phone to run this application. There are many apps that require both of these features to execute first but when we talk about Spyic, there is no need to do anything like that.

Its user-friendly web-based interface lets you use the app with all browsers. There is no need to install a separate one just to gain access to the spied phone. With the help of this guide you will get to know about how this application operates everything easily with all browsers so go for the one that is already in your PC.

Spyic works for all kinds of OS. Using it for android as well as for iOS is equally fine. For android you can install the app in the target phone initially and allow it to run in the background. For iOS just add the iCloud account details of the target phone and leave the rest of the work on the app to deal with.

The app is really small in size, doesn't take much space in the target phone and doesn't drain the battery of the device so it is safe to use the app for everyone. If you notice then you will see that the app's icon will be removed after the installation so you are good to go for this app as nobody would be able to know that you are behind spying.

To track the live location of the target device you need to follow the target phone on a map where you are supposed to mark a few places and whenever the device will cross those marked places you will receive an alert and would be able to see the live location as well as the previous ones.

This feature is known as geofence as it allows you to see the location of the target phone easily. You can get to know where the device is at the current moment with the help of this app. Users can see the live demo feature of the app on the official website to know how it works.
