

How to turn off friend birthday notifications on Skype

Usually Skype will let the friend's birthday notification mode be on the list for users to know. However, this birthday announcement sometimes annoys you so we can turn them off.

Like Facebook and Zalo, Skype also lets you display friends' birthday notifications by default, making it possible to send greetings to friends on the list. However, when you receive too many birthday announcements, it is also a nuisance, especially for those who do not know. So how can I turn off the birthday notification on Skype? Please refer to the following detailed tutorial of Network Administrator.

Step 1:

First of all, we log into our Skype account. In the interface, click on Tools then select Options . Or we can use the keyboard shortcut Ctrl + , to quickly access the Options section of the account.

Step 2:

Switch to the new interface, here you click the Notifications item in the list to the left of the interface.

Step 3:

In the Notifications Settings section, looking at the content on the right will see the notification settings on the Skype account. By default, notifications will be set to On.

In order to not receive the news of your friend's birthday on the account, the user will uncheck the item in the has a birthday section . Then, click the Save button at the bottom of the interface to save it.

So you will not receive any birthday announcements on your Skype account anymore. In addition to the above settings list, users can optionally turn on or turn off sending messages, sending contact information, offline status on Skype, etc. If you want to receive notifications again, you just need to select them again. option dropped.
