Method 1: Turn off laptop screen using hotkey on laptop

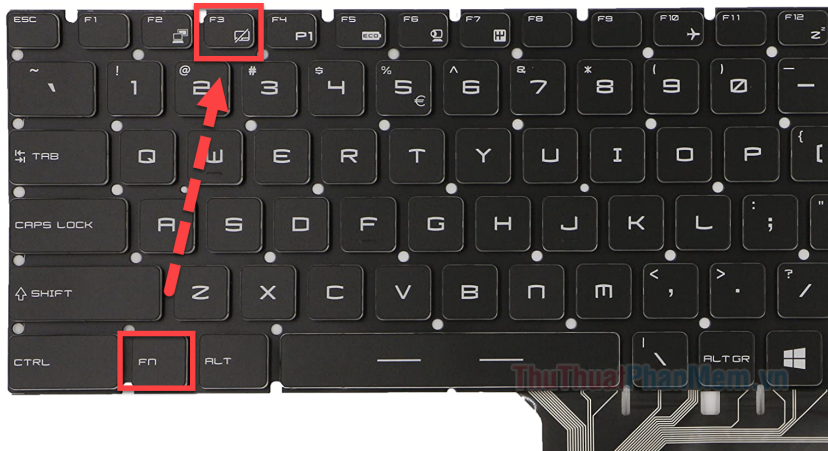

Windows 11 operating system does not have a built-in shortcut key to help you turn off the computer screen. But now most of the latest laptop models have a built-in hotkey to help you turn off the screen manually.

Basically, this hotkey is usually located on the top row of your keyboard (from F1 to F12). It has the function of turning off the screen while the laptop still operates normally, serving you for many different purposes such as: taking a break without turning off the computer, hanging up the computer or listening to music when the screen is off.

Step 1 : First, look at the keys from F1 - F12 on your laptop keyboard to see if there is a Screen Off icon.

This icon usually has an image of ' Cross-Over Display ', the words ' LCD ' or simply the word ' Screen ' icon.

In the example below for an MSI laptop, TipsMake found the ' Screen crossed out ' icon on the keyboard.

Step 2 : After finding the hotkey, press FN + hotkey at the same time to turn off the screen.

To turn on the screen, simply perform this combination again.

Method 2: Turn off the laptop screen using the timer feature

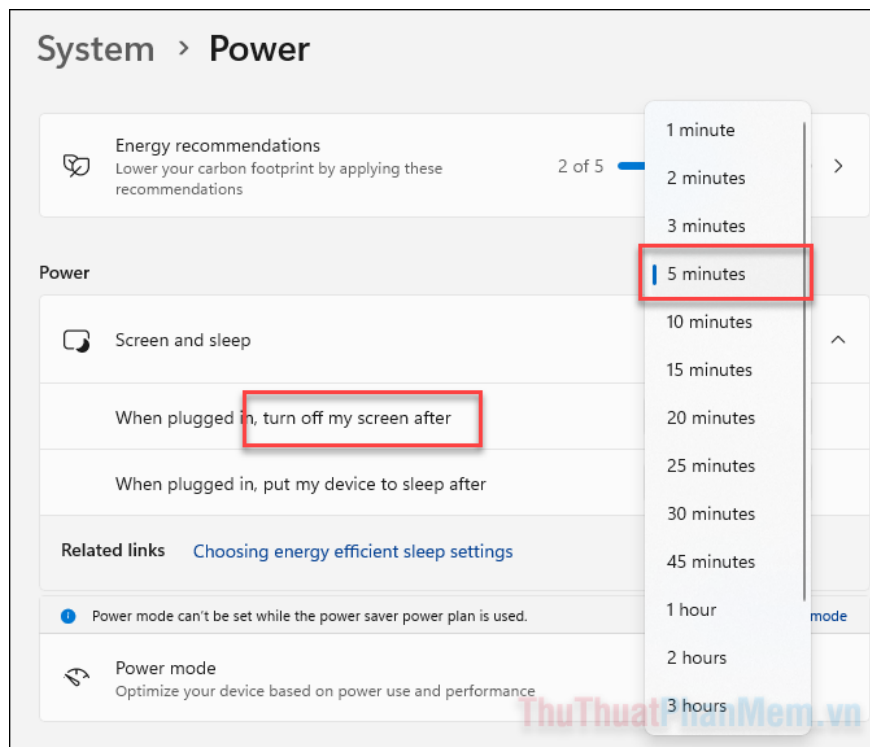

If you can't find the hotkey to turn off the screen on your laptop, use the timer feature to turn off the screen.

Step 1 : Press Windows + I to open Settings, then go to System >> Power >> Screen and sleep .

Step 2 : In Turn off my screen after , select the time to wait for the screen to turn off.

For example: you choose the time as 5 minutes (5 minutes) - when you do not operate on the computer, the screen will automatically turn off.

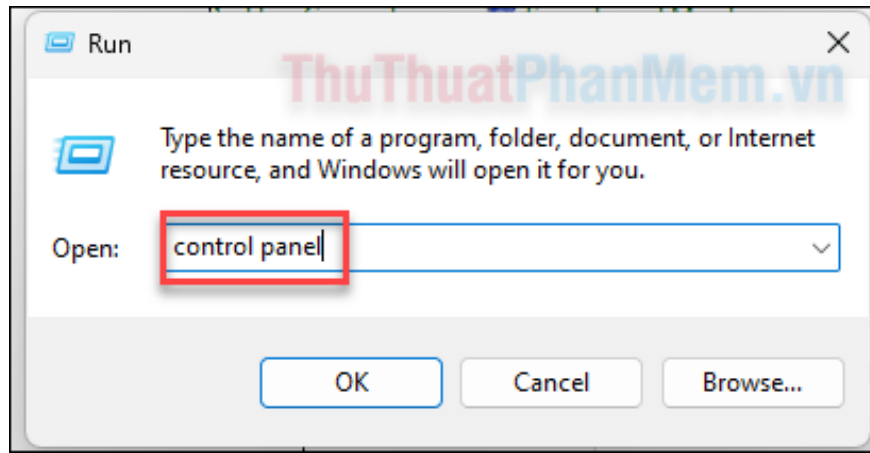

Step 3 : To prevent your laptop from automatically going into sleep mode (which will turn off your music), set the Put my device to sleep after item to Never .

Method 3: Set up screen off using the power button

Normally, you need to hold down the power button to force the computer to shut down. So, you can assign the power button a feature that turns off the screen when pressed once .

Step 1 : Press Windows R to open the Run dialog box >> type control panel and Enter .

Step 2 : Switch to Small icons view , then click Power Options in the list below.

Step 3 : Pay attention to the left area, click on the Choose what the power buttons do setting .

Step 4 : In the When I press the power button section , select Turn off the display .

Then click Save changes to save the changes.

So, with this setting, you can turn off the Windows 11 laptop screen immediately by just pressing the power button once . To turn the screen back on, press any key on the keyboard.
