HP's low-cost line of Windows computers has just been sold for the HP Stream 11 for a very low price - only $ 199 (about 4 million) with 1 year of using Office 365.

This may be called a mainstream laptop that competes directly with Chromebooks running Google's Chrome OS (although HP also has Chromebooks). Because it is sold at a very low price, you will not need to ask for anything more than to handle basic daily tasks such as web browsing, Skype chat, text writing, etc. HP Stream 11 also has weight. Very light, so you can take them everywhere.

Going into the configuration, HP Stream 11 is equipped with 11.6-inch screen with 1366x768 pixel resolution, Intel Celeron processor at 2.16GHz, 2GB RAM, 32GB internal memory, Wi-Fi 802.11 b / g / n, Bluetooth, 1 USB 2.0 port and 1 USB 3.0 port with a 3.37Wh battery, according to its information, the battery can be used an average of 8 hours after a full charge. The configuration can be said to be not high compared to the current laptop's overall level but just enough compared to the price range of only 4-6 million for HP Stream 11.

HP Stream 11 comes with Windows 8.1 with Bing operating system to reduce the price of copyright, and when you buy Stream 11, you also get 1 year promotion to use the Office 365 suite. Also, when you buy on Amazon, you also get a 25 USD gift card on the Windows Store to help you buy paid apps or games on the Windows app store.
