

HP unveiled a multi-touch touchscreen laptop

Yesterday (November 19), HP officially launched the first laptop (laptop) with multi-touch display (multi-touch display).

Yesterday (November 19), HP officially launched the first laptop computer (laptop) equipped with multi-touch display (multi-touch display) designed specifically for users. often.

HP TouchSmart tx2 Notebook PC is a 'CONVERTIBLE' laptop - a design that is designed to be mounted on an axis that can be omnidirectional. The manufacturer claims that this design combined with a touch screen will give HP TouchSmart tx2 its own three different operating modes - including a normal laptop, touch screen display. and tablets.

The touch screen on the HP TouchSmart tx2, developed on the touch screen technology platform, has been used on HP's TouchSmart Desktop PC desktop product for a long time.

Specifically the screen of the HP TouchSmart tx2 is a widescreen (widescreen) of 12.1-inch size and reaches a maximum image resolution of 1280 x 800. With this screen plus an electronic pen, the user has absolutely Can write directly on the screen system will automatically recognize the writing.

The HP TouchSmart tx2 is equipped with an AMD Turion X2 Ultra Dual-Core Mobile Processor and AMD Turion X2 Dual-Core Mobile Processor and can be expanded to 8GB of SDRAM. In case tx2 uses RAM that exceeds 4GB and up to 8GB the operating system used will be required to be Vista 64-bit. Normally, it's still a normal 32-bit Vista version. Users can choose to use Vista Home Premium, Vista Ultimate or Vista Business.

Some other features of TouchSmart tx2 include the removable ATI Radeon HD 3200 portable graphics card, the DVD burner that supports dual-layer discs, integrated 10/10/100 Gigabit Ethernet LAN, Wifi 802.11 a / b / g / n, Bluetooth, USB 2.0 port, VGA outgoing port, hard drive with capacity from 160-500GB .

The HP TouchSmart tx2 is now available in the US market for $ 1,149.

You finished reading the article "HP unveiled a multi-touch touchscreen laptop" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.