

IdeaPad Y510p: Laptop gaming with Core i7 Haswell chip

Recently, Lenovo has officially released a laptop model for IdeaPad Y510p dedicated game. This can be considered as an upgrade of IdeaPad Y500 previously released with 'heart' is Intel's 4th generation Haswell Core i7 processor.

Recently, Lenovo has officially released a laptop model for IdeaPad Y510p dedicated game. This can be considered as an upgrade of IdeaPad Y500 previously released with 'heart' is Intel's 4th generation Haswell Core i7 processor.

Specifically, the Y510 is equipped with Intel Core i7 4700MQ quad-core chip with 2.40 GHz speed and 15.6-inch anti-glare screen with resolution of 1,080x1,920 pixels and integrated Nvidia 750M 2 GB GDDR5 graphics card.

It owns 8 GB of RAM (can be upgraded to 16 GB) with a 1 TB HDD for 5,400 RPM. In addition, Lenovo also equips the Y510p DVD Burner, Intel's N-2230 wireless card and Bluetooth 4.0.

Another special feature is that users can optionally upgrade an SSD or Nvidia GT750M card to run in SLI mode through Ultrabay (a removable optical drive tray from the camera body and replace it with a graphics card). discrete graphics, hard drive or add a fan for the device.

Some other images of Lenovo IdeaPad Y510p laptop.

Currently, users can order IdeaPad Y510p laptop on Lenovo.com or Newegg.com. With the configuration as mentioned above, the product has the lowest selling price of 989 USD. If you decide to upgrade more RAM, SSD or graphics card, the price may be higher from 300 to 500 USD.

You finished reading the article "IdeaPad Y510p: Laptop gaming with Core i7 Haswell chip" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.