Agar is a browser game with a fairly simple way of playing, like the 'big fish swallowing small fish' form. And players only need to access the Agar.io website directly, creating a username to start playing.

1. What is Agar.io?

Agario is one of the browser games with a fairly simple gameplay and the best browser to play is the Chrome browser. To start playing games, users only need to access Agar.io.

Agar.io was created by a user on Steam called M28, and appeared on Steam Greenlight in early May. Although it just appeared, Agar was quickly spread at dizzying speed, attracting attention. the idea of ??thousands of gamers.

2. How to play game Agario

How to play Agar.io is quite simple. Basically, the first step is to access the Agar.io website address, then select a username. After you have made your selection, you will be moved to the interface with many small round dots with different colors.

The aim of the game is that the user has to move, control his or her dot on the screen, eat the smaller round dots lying around to 'feed' their round dots, while moving away from the dots. otherwise, they will "swallow" you and mean the game will end.

To control the game, users only need to use the Mouse / track pad , the 'W' key and the Spacebar . Your dotted navigational mouse moves around, and the Spacebar allows the user to divide the body and the W key to release the bait.

3. Some good tips and tactics when playing Agar.io

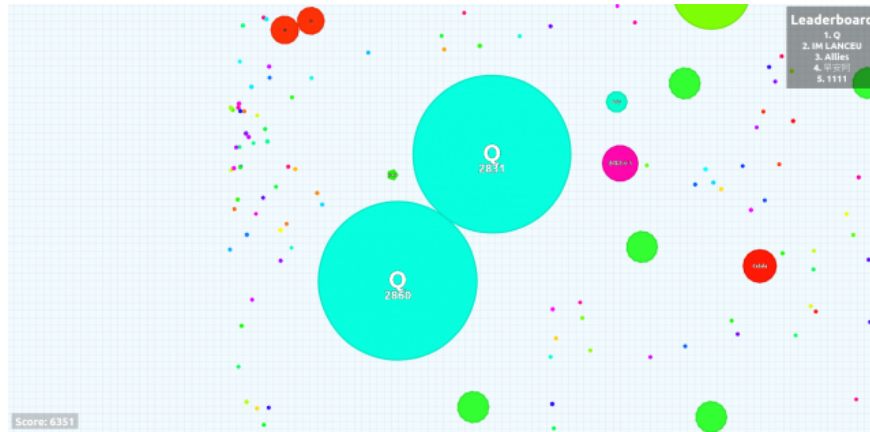

3.1. Hide behind the virus to "preserve" your dot

When your dot is small, you will often see larger round dots moving to 'swallow' you. If in the process of being 'pursued' and you think you have no way to 'escape', then look around to see if any virus is nearby, which is the greatest hope to be able to. ' preserve your round dot.

Large round dots never "liked" the virus. The simple reason is that when the dots are larger than the virus that touches the virus, the virus can 'divide' them into pieces. So by 'hiding' after the virus, you can completely escape the pursuit of large round dots.

3.2. Trapping or cornering opponents

The Agario game space has no limits, so you can take advantage of this to trap or corner your opponent into the 'wall'. If you put a small dot on the edges of the game, you can easily "swallow" them because they have no way to run.

3.3. Use viruses to divide the opponent's body

As mentioned above, viruses can divide large round dots into different parts if they are 'eaten'. If your opponent is trying to find a way to "swallow" you, it is extremely useful to eat the virus in this case. Just press the W key 7 times directly into the virus, when you 'encounter' the larger round dots, you will be 'preserved' your dot.

3.4. When you are 'big enough' and can 'hunt', it is better to 'divide' your body

The bigger your dot, the harder and slower it is to move the dot. So the best tactic in this case is that you should 'divide' your dots to improve movement speed as well as find and 'swallow' the small round dots nearby more easily.

4. Some other strategies and advice

When you are at 200-300:

1. If your dot is small, use Space to 'swallow' other small dots faster.
1. The best way for your dot to grow is to eat larger round dots divided into small parts.
1. Also when you get stuck between other bigger dots near the 'border', the best way is to go in 0.5s then move in the other direction. Large round dots will move more slowly, so you should take advantage of this weakness of them.

4. Agar.io Extensions, Skins and Mods

The best place to find good mods and skins for Agar.io is to visit AgarioMods.com website, or install the Agar.io Mods Chrome Browser Extension.
