

India created an outline on shale to set the world's highest record

Hundreds of people in the Indian capital have set a world record together by drawing a picture on a giant slate.

1. Meet the skilful rabbit basketball player to achieve a world record
2. The paper airplane folding tips can hover nearly 70m
3. 10 rare records are unbelievable about the human body

Hundreds of people in the Indian capital have set a world record together by drawing a picture on a giant slate.

About 500 people joined hands to paint a picture that stretched over 1,200 meters on the Indian Cultural Trail in Indianapolis to set a Guinness World Record for the largest art performance of chalk on the sidewalk.

The work is also part of a three-day effort to clear the sidewalk of the city by Eli Lilly, the pharmaceutical company, and the Keep Indianapolis Beautiful organization.

KIB spokesman Ashley Haynes told the Indianapolis Star: "The Guinness world record that this project has achieved shows a new good for the city of Indianapolis." Many individuals and organizations together create this art work not only to break the world record, but also to show the change in people's perceptions of public buildings. '

Representative of Guinness, Christina Conlon was present to measure the artistic picture in Indianapolis and announced the new record title.

The pavement painting on the slate is made up of 811 drawings, nearly twice the record of 423 photos ever made by a community in Prince Edward, Canada.

Haynes said: "The volunteers and the Indianapolis community really did something amazing and amazing."

You finished reading the article "India created an outline on shale to set the world's highest record" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.