

Instagram displayed Follows You to know who followed you

To know if your boss, a secret friend, or an ex-lover who is following you on Instagram has become much simpler when Instagram releases a new feature that says a person is following Watch you or not.

To know if your boss, a secret friend, or an ex-lover who is following you on Instagram has become much simpler when Instagram releases a new feature that says a person is following Watch you or not.

Some Android users reported seeing Follows You information on the Followers introduction section. Just like on Twitter, you have a useful 'indicator' to see if the person you're viewing has followed you on Instagram.

Tracking information is displayed right at the introduction

Now instead of having to choose the Following tab and find your name, you just glance over and see the information you need. Very useful to decide who to follow again.

This feature is currently not available on all Android devices. iOS 11 has not been updated yet. The lucky ones who have been updated say that they are happy that this useful feature has finally appeared.

You finished reading the article "Instagram displayed Follows You to know who followed you" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.
