2. How to play Dota Auto Chess

Just like the name of the game, Dota Auto Chess will allow players to form teams with 8 players and fight to become the last. Each player's stage will be like an 8x8 chess board, instead of using chess pieces, the player will use the DOTA 2 Heroes with improvements in skills and characteristics of the hero.

Each player will have a separate round, if winning each round the player will receive a bonus, if lost, it will be deducted HP and if the HP is deducted is considered lost.

You can buy generals in each round based on the money available, then arrange them at your disposal on the board for 30 seconds. After the end of the time of buying and arranging a champion, the enemy will appear on the board and will battle your champion.

In the first 3 rounds, you will be fighting with AI to gain experience and gold, with capital and then you start investing in your squad. Next you will be arranged to another player's map to automatically attack your squad, and there will also be times when your squad will wait for others to automatically attack.

Another thing is when you are in the upgrade period and wait for the new round, you can go to the map of other players for reference. This way will help you know what other players' squad is, so the chances of winning will be much higher.

Each champion in Dota Auto Chess will have intrinsic skills, or skills that are activated. Your character will have more mana when attacked or attacked by an enemy.

3. Tips to play Dota Auto Chess

If you want to win, then rely on each character's skills and characteristics to combine into different combos, so your squad will support each other well.

In addition, you can exchange gold for experience and can level up depending on the situation. In the original rounds, you have the advantage of not having to face directly with other players, so take advantage of it to upgrade and combine a rational team, you will be one step ahead of other players. This time if you know how to upgrade

If you just play, you should choose Mech and Elf squad because the fighting style is quite simple and easy to play. Two different class teams will have a chance to win higher when using the same lineup.

The above is a few small experiences to help you in the first steps of Dota Auto Chess, hopefully you will know how to form a rational team and win many.
