If the invoice is on a handheld printer, the KH code will be displayed above.

If successful, your information will be displayed, along with the invoice amount. Click Payments to agree to pay the bill.

If your funds in the MOMO wallet are not enough, you can change to another link, possibly the previously linked bank account, then click confirm.

If you see a successful transaction message that means you have already paid your electricity bill for that month, click Home screen to return to the interface of Momo wallet.

With just a few simple steps, you can make electricity bill payments through your Momo e-wallet without having to go to the power company or authorized electricity collection points. Very convenient for those who work.

As I said above, in order to pay bills or transfer money, you have to deposit money into your Momo wallet account, and for now Momo supports users with many different forms of deposit. You can refer to the ways to fund Momo via the article 5 ways to deposit money into Momo wallet simply and quickly .
