To do that, you can do in the following two ways:

Method 1:

Open the View ribbon on the toolbar, then select to uncheck the Gridlines line in the Show section .

As you can see, when you remove the check marks, the lines that are left out will immediately disappear.

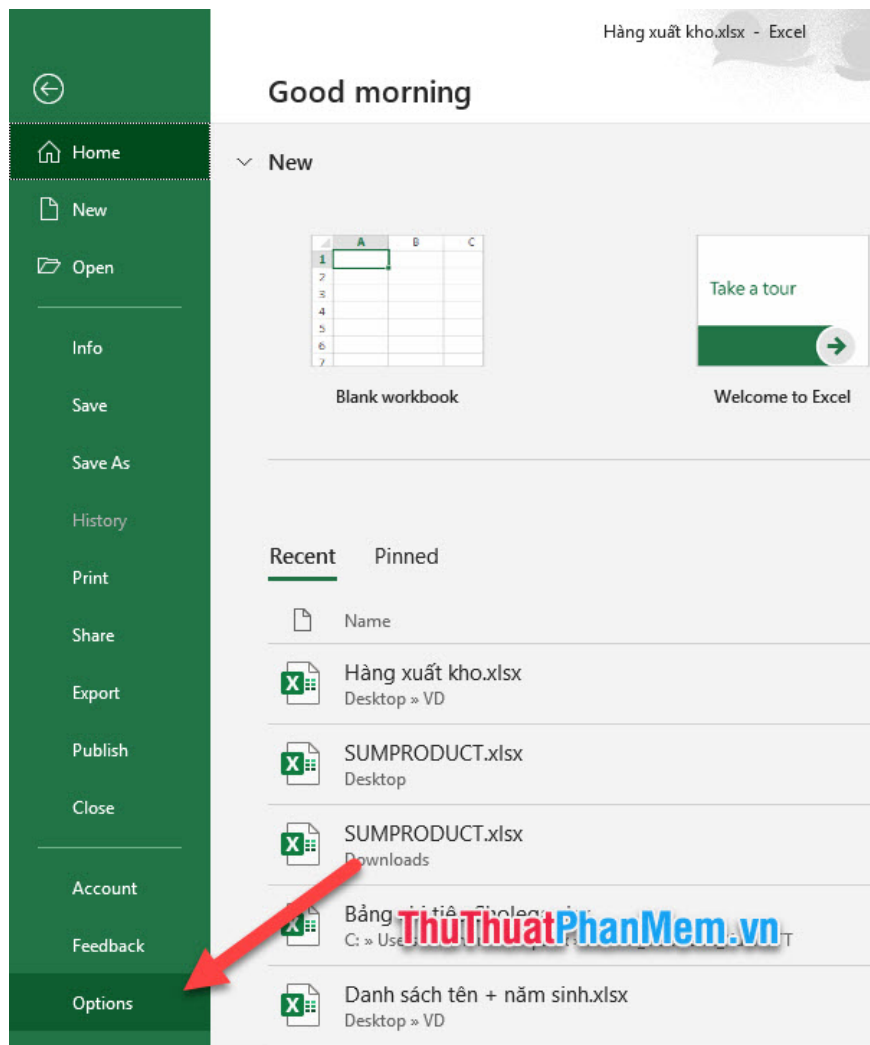

Method 2:

One way to delete the grid lines is to open the File ribbon on the toolbar.

The screenshot shows the Microsoft Excel interface with the 'File' menu open. A red arrow points to the 'File' menu. The spreadsheet contains a table with 16 rows and 3 columns. The first row is a header with green background. The second row to the tenth row have a light green background. The eleventh row is empty. The twelfth row to the sixteenth row have a light blue background. A watermark 'ThuThuatPhanMem.vn' is visible over the bottom part of the table.

Next you open the Options item in the File list just displayed.

The Excel Options function window pane will open. You click open Advanced section of this function window pane.

Keep scrolling down to search for Display options for this worksheet .

You click to uncheck the box before Show gridlines in this section.

Finally click OK to confirm the changes have been installed. Then all redundant lines of Excel worksheet will be deleted.

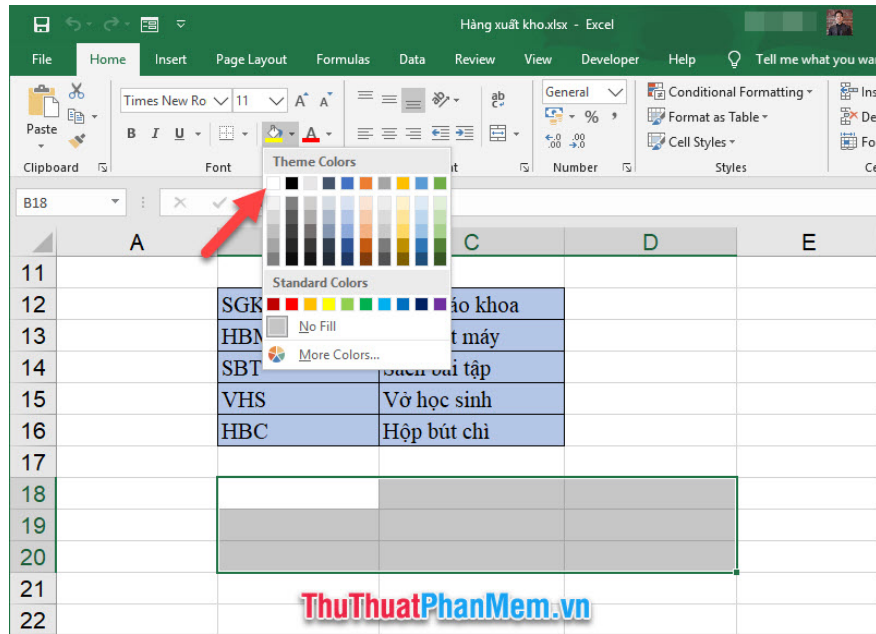

2. Delete the grid lines in a certain area

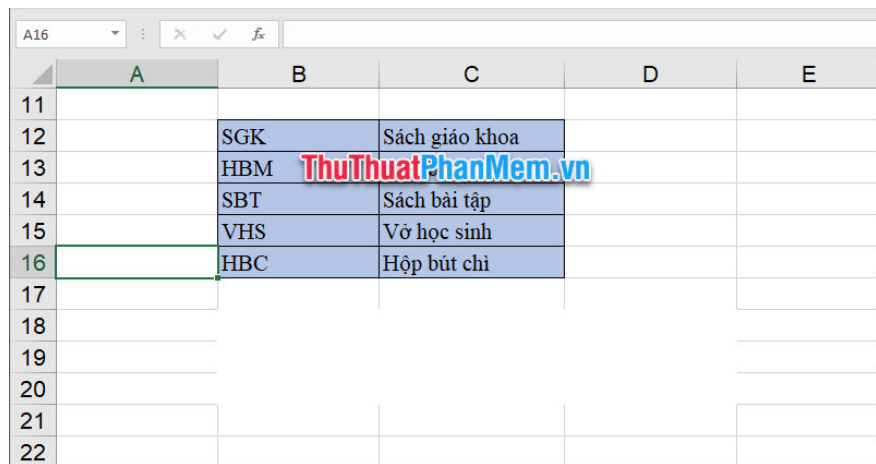

To delete the grid line in a certain area, highlight the area you want to delete the grid line.

Next, open the Home ribbon on the toolbar, click the Shading icon located in the Font section of this ribbon.

Then you select white (or any other color can also create a rectangular array of colors without lines).

The resulting array you selected will be filled with white and no visible gridlines.

To remove the color, restore the grid, highlight the location, click Shading, and select the No Fill line .
