

Instructions on how to prevent Facebook from automatically translating text

Facebook is a worldwide social network with hundreds of millions of users speaking different languages. The automatic text translation feature makes it easy to understand what foreign friends say, but you don't always need this feature.

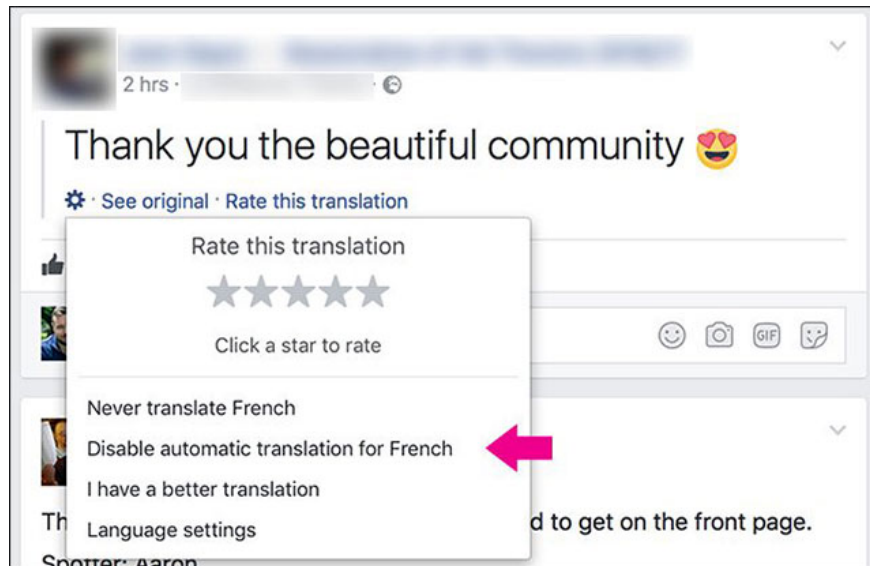

There may be plenty of reasons for you to see a piece of text that is not written in English. To make it easier for users, Facebook automatically translates these texts. This feature is quite useful but not always the correct translation of the text.

Facebook automatically translates the text

For example, ' Merci la belle communauté ' is closer to ' Thanks to the beautiful community ' but is translated into Facebook ' Thank you the beautiful community '. If you encounter similar situations when translating foreign languages, perhaps the automatic translation feature of Facebook makes you more annoyed than helpful. Here's how to prevent Facebook from translating text.

When you see a post automatically translated on New Feed, click the Settings icon and select Disable Automatic Translation For. This option turns off automatic translation of text but still leaves the option Translate this Post to translate again if desired. Choose Never Translate , you won't see that option anymore.

Turn off automatic text translation

Alternatively, go to Settings > Language (select the arrow icon pointing down at the right corner of the interface). Here, fill in the languages ??you don't want Facebook to automatically translate into the box Which Languages ??Do You not Want Automatically Translated.

Select Settings settings

Find language options (Language)

Enter the language you don't want Facebook to automatically translate

Then click Save Changes, posts in this language will no longer be automatically translated.
