With Touch Lock application, you can temporarily touch the touch screen on your Android phone screen and be completely assured with children pressing the wrong key or some important feature. Here's how to use Touch Lock to turn off the touch screen on Android.

Lock the phone touch screen with Touch Lock application

The first thing you need to do is install the Touch Lock child lock application on Android device. When you launch the application for the first time, the application will guide you with the necessary things so you can use it easily.

The third screen is when you need to grant access to the application. This is essential to lock the touch screen when your child is using an Android device. Tap Enable Now when the application requires, then the application will display the settings menu.

Search for Touch Lock in the list and turn on use access option. Press the Back button to return to the application, tap 3 vertical dots to select Settings. Make sure that Unlock guide is disabled, as this is a way to instruct users to disable the application.

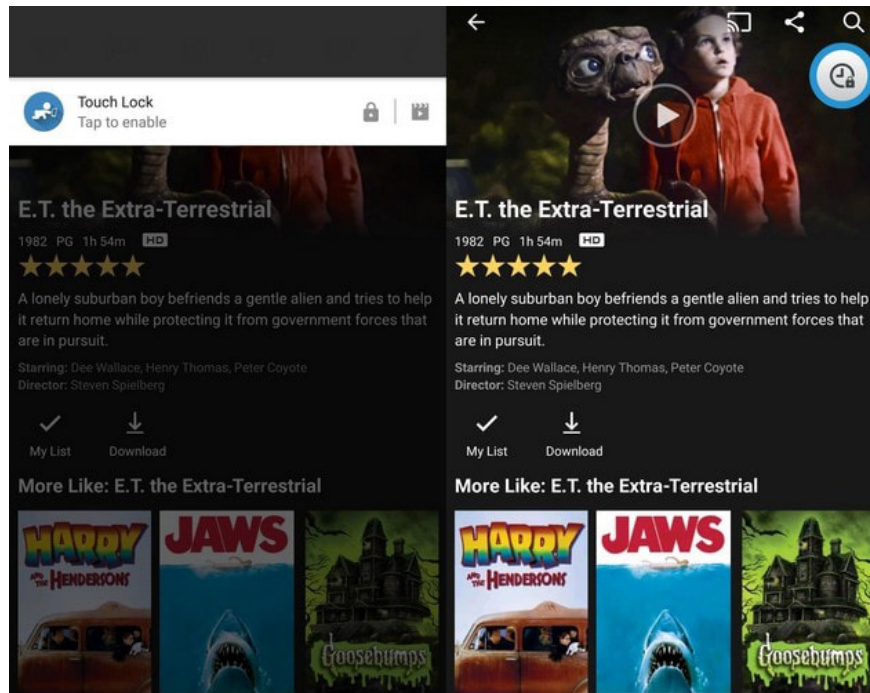

As default, you only need to touch 2 times to unlock the screen. However, by selecting Unlock setting, you can change it to 4 touches to open. When installing as you like, try turning on the Sponge Bob Square Pants video, flicking the screen from the top down and selecting application notifications.

When your child is bored with the video, just double-click the semi-transparent icon on the right side of the screen. If your child wants to watch videos online on Netflix, the process will be a little different.
