Just over a week after the release of the first complete jailbreak for iOS 7 called evasi0n, the hacker group evad3rs has just released an updated version for it, with the main feature being to fix the autostart error continuously. on iPad 2.

The update helps fix errors that automatically restart on iPad 2 after jailbreaking iOS 7.

Just over a week after the release of the first complete jailbreak for iOS 7 called " evasi0n ", the hacker group evad3rs has just released an updated version for it, with the main feature of fixing the self-restart error. continuous on iPad 2.

Version evad3rs 1.0.2 Beta is available for free here . As recommended by evad3rs , users should back up all data before jailbreaking , and disable the passcode . If you want to restore the original version of the operating system to your computer, use iTunes.

Although there was an error on the first version that led to the appearance of this update, evasi0n is considered to be a very good iOS 7 jailbreak tool. There are reports that the famous hacker group evad3rs must release evasi0n early and somewhat surprised because their achievements have been stolen.

In addition, some rumors also suspected that the evad3rs group had received funding from China to install the malicious code on this jailbreak, as evidenced by the appearance of a Chinese application on the device after jailbreaking the device with evasi0n .

However, this information seems to be inaccurate, and the image of the Chinese application's appearance may only be misplaced by the user from the Taig application store . According to a member of the evad3rs group, Taig violated the contract when providing applications of unknown origin and will work with Taig on this issue.

" In our contract with Taig, we have a convention of not selling unlocking applications in their booth. This is an extremely important condition when working together. When signing a contract, We were hoping that the cooperation with Taig would help improve copyright infringement in China . We are very sad, although it has been thoroughly evaluated but still has pirated software in the store. This is not acceptable, and we will work again with Taig for the best solution , " said a member of the evad3rs.
