

Leaking OnePlus 6 images, there are also grooves on the screen like the iPhone

The next OnePlus phone is expected to have many changes.

OnePlus 6 is waiting for a lot of significant upgrades, including switching to Qualcomm's Snapdragon 845 open processor currently being used on the Galaxy S9. But it seems that this new device also brings controversial design - rabbit ears.

According to some pictures leaked from ITHome site, OnePlus 6 might have a slot on the phone screen like iPhone X. Although it is only a prototype image, the design of OnePlus 6 is not surprising because many other phone companies, including Huawei, follow this direction.

There are reports that even Google will also offer the next version of Android to support the groove, so it is likely that more and more Android phones will have this feature.

What about the face recognition system?

Perhaps the OnePlus will use this slot to hold the front camera and speaker, it is unclear whether the face recognition system is available. Currently, OnePlus already has this feature, but adding more slots to the phone can be upgraded significantly to reach iPhone X.

The leaked image also shows that the OnePlus does not remove the fingerprint sensor, which is located behind, under the same vertical dual camera system on Samsung Galaxy S9. In addition, the OnePlus 6 has a number of P7810 which seems to be made of glass, which could result in wireless charging.

OS images show that the prototype of this phone runs Android 8.1 and 6GB RAM, 64GB internal memory, though it may be upgraded in the official version.
