Recently, Chrome has implemented a very interesting experience game on its browser, helping users build spelling and pronunciation skills. Unlike other games, you'll need to use your voice in this game, and make sure you turn on the computer speakers.

Spell Up is a Web API-based Chrome test and the latest voice recognition technology, making your browser a place to learn pronunciation.

How to play Spell Up

When you start the game, select the level through 3 suggestions: Beginner, Intermediate or Advanced (beginner, intermediate, advanced). The ultimate goal of this game is to spell exactly the words you hear through the speakers and use them to build towers (words). You will have to stack the tower with each letter, word by word.

1. Use Google Chrome to learn foreign languages ??when browsing the web

Here are some challenges you need to overcome:

1. The words will gradually become more difficult when the tower is taller.

2. You must pronounce the words correctly, rearrange the jumbled words, guess the correct words by filling in the missing letters.

You can also use the keyboard to type letters. Similar to other games, you will have a life (if you lose, you will have to play again from scratch) and can earn bonuses. Use the bonuses earned to unlock 'powerups' and jump to new levels faster.

You can play Spell Up on Chrome with your computer, Android phone or tablet.

Build spelling skills

Simple browser games like Spell Up not only help you reduce stress but also improve your vocabulary. When you play to a higher level, you will find yourself experiencing more challenges that make you try to overcome them. Google also encourages teachers to test this game in their classrooms.

Let's experience this exciting game on your browser.
