

Lien Quan Mobile: Top 3 most affected generals after Ban Tru was wiped out

The news that the Forbidden Pillar is dead is making Lien Quan Mobile gamers cry, and at the same time, it brings along some cards that are at risk of 'out meta' because they cannot confidently roll out!

Accordingly, Exhaustion will be replaced for Ban Tru in the next season of Lien Quan Mobile. Certainly, the eye-catching turret phases to force the fight will also disappear in the next time when the Forbidden Tower is officially wiped out.

Moreover, the consequences also make some generals suffer heavily when the powerful combat summoner spell disappears.

Volkath

For Volkath, getting on and off in enemy turrets is 'as easy as turning the hand', moreover, when there is a Forbidden Pillar, he will become an ideal card for those who aspire to hunt down opponents because no one can stop it.

Similar to Tachi, Volkath is also an Assistant of Lien Quan Mobile, possessing the ability to initiate combat and can wipe out the enemy team. Certainly, all of the opponent's damage must be poured into Volkath and he will become truly immortal when dismounting if he has the spell Forbidden Turret in his hand.

Besides, the slow ADC cards like Yorn, Tel'Annas, . always have to show restraint and fear because Volkath is always their enemy. Many gamers often have a gameplan that focuses mainly on your AD team and then one side is wasted while the other side is 'blue green'.

However, Garena significantly intervened to nerf Volkath from mid to late season 20, of course when the spell Forbidden Turret disappeared in season 21, the possibility of Volkath 'out meta' is very high!

Aya

What a pity for Aya to have to say goodbye to the power of the Forbidden Pillar! Before this summoner spell 'died', she was famous for being a mobile summoner for the whole team, especially for strong teams at the beginning of the game and likes to unleash and force fights. It's no longer too awkward for the opponent to hold onto the turret and refuse to fight, for Aoi, Superman, and Butterfly because there is an Aya on his head with the support spell, freely unleashing the enemy without worrying about losing blood.

The death of the Summoner is a rather unfortunate matter to come but luckily for Aya as there are still some other 'stabilizing' options such as Rescue, Purification or Explosion. Each spell will bring a little specific benefit to each position Aya sits on, so playing Aya will have to actively use summoning spells to save her teammates.

Tachi

Tachi is the champion that has been leading in popularity recently, especially at the beginning of season 20. Indeed, Tachi holding the Forbidden Pillar has created a terrible fever, sweeping through high-ranked matches and even tournaments. big and small competition inside and outside the area.

This is a card designed for the position of Ta Than road warrior with the ability to deal true damage from passive attacks, however, over time and through "shows" in the tournament, Tachi is known. widely in the role of Support and holding the Forbidden Turret - a gameplay that makes countless pairs of Support and enemy AD teams terrified by both their turrets and Tachi's turrets, opening fights to continuously push the 'couple' of the Dragon lane on the other side of the line down to a passive position, and at the same time was snubbed for the strongest main force, the Gunner.

That's to see, Tachi in the next season when he no longer has Ban Tru, he has to learn how to 'friend' with Exhausted, otherwise he has to return to his original position as a Dragon warrior, ready to support the team thanks to his ability. absorb damage and damage attacks that can penetrate the opponent's armor.
