Over time, Omen will become more and more useful, so this will be a good choice for players who like to play solo. With Omen, you can tank to take damage and capture enemy champions to support the team. Besides, going up in the direction of damage you can also create a shock of damage if you know how to apply Omen's 2nd skill well.

Although Omen is a general who does not need too many skills, you should try to watch the time when the enemy champion accumulates damage to use the 2nd skill properly. Players should take advantage of skill 1 to pull first, then use skill 2 to bring the best effect.

Wukong

Currently, when going to Top, Wukong will be the type of general who does not care who the enemy Top is, but mainly aims to smash the enemy's gunner and mage. However, it should be noted that Wukong needs to have a new item to deal damage effectively, so try to farm well when choosing this champion for Ta Than lane.

When using skills, you should combine normal attacks to maximize the amount of damage possible. You can apply combo 1 to stealth, then attack normally and then use the ultimate + normal attack, followed by the 2nd normal attack to make sure to get the enemy's life.

Murad

In season S1 2023, players who pick Murad to go solo Evil god need to be careful to avoid enemy teams that have a lot of control. The use of Murad will be most appropriate when the enemy team has a lot of blood, the more directional moves, the easier it is to be overwhelmed by Murad.

However, you can also target the archers and mages of the enemy team in the mid and late game. Note, you need to correctly align the passive of Slashing Illusion to avoid the case of rushing into the poke without using the ultimate but being controlled and easily defeated. Pay attention to Murad's shadow to see if the enemy picks it up or not.

When playing Murad, it is advisable to place the ball in a safe place, like in the grass or in a turret, far from the teamfight so that it can be easily poked.

Florentino

Once you master Florentino, even if you meet any opposing generals in the area of Ta Than Street, you can suppress it. However, this champion has 1 limitation that is often canceled the ultimate.

Also, in teamfights, instead of trying to find and launch the ultimate on your team's backline, you can choose to use it right away on the nearest enemy champion and then dash out to throw flowers and dance, so it will be a part of the game. which can limit the control. The combo of catching the enemy team's paper heroes is quite simple, you can throw flowers with move 1 and dance Florentino.

Zuka

Finally, there is Zuka, a general with a variety of gameplay in the Top lane area, making it possible for gamers to comfortably confront many different generals on the evil road such as gladiators to gunners.

However, it should also be noted that Zuka must attack normally after launching the move. However, it is not necessary to always apply the standard combo formula that can diversify the gameplay to shock your team with skill 3 and close the enemy with skill 1 and 2. Try to reverse ganks as much as possible, Move a lot, farm gold effectively to increase the advantage for the whole team.

In the case of solo with the enemy team or rushing into a fight, use skill 2 reasonably to optimize virtual armor. And when meeting non-mobile generals, you should put all combos to avoid counter damage. And when you meet a mobile champion, wait for the enemy to launch a move first and then use moves 1 and 2 to lure and hook, don't rush to put all combos.
