MX Master is Logitech's high-end wireless mouse line that's appreciated. Recently, Logitech has launched the MX Master 3 version with many upgrades, promising to bring users a better experience than the previous generation.

MX Master 3 is equipped with a scroll wheel with electromagnetic mechanism (electromagnetic) completely new instead of mechanics (mechanical). This scroll wheel provides 87% higher accuracy than the previous version, the MX Master 2S. There are two winding mechanisms, step roll and free roll. Logitech's new electromagnetic mechanism, called Magspeed, enhances the smoothness of the free-flowing coil and reduces the noise on each step.

Unlike the old version of the scroll button made of rubber, the scroll button on the MX Master 3 is made of all stainless steel.

The extra button and horizontal scroll wheel are improved with stainless steel material and are designed to make the coil more comfortable. Instead of being next to it, the 2 back / forward buttons are moved below the scroll button.

MX Master 3 is equipped with a USB-C charging port instead of Micro USB.

Similar to MX Master 2s, MX Master 3 still uses a 4,000 DPI sensor, supports connection to a computer with Bluetooth or USB receiver for up to 3 devices and a battery of up to 70 days.

In addition to the MX Master 3 mouse, Logitech also introduced the cheaper, MX version of the Logitech Craft keyboard. MX Keys redesigned more popular, removed the knob, USB-C port, connected by receiver, supports Windows, Mac, iOS, Android. The MX Master 3 has a battery life of up to 7 months if the light is turned off (the lamp automatically lights when typing) or 10 days if the light is on.

Both MX Master 3 and MX Keys are priced at US $ 100, and will be available later this month.
