

Losing a leg because I just pressed the phone and entered the elevator

The girl stared intently at the phone so she didn't notice that the elevator was about to move but still walked in so she stumbled and fell onto the elevator floor. The elevator continued to move up while the girl's legs were still stuck between the two doors causing it to break.

Just going while texting, surfing Facebook or playing games is what makes many people do every day without knowing it has many dangers such as falling, hitting other people, even being seriously injured.

Recently, a video of the accident happened to a Chinese woman who was looking at the phone posted online that many people were afraid of. Specifically, the girl stared intently at the phone so she did not notice that the elevator was about to move but still stepped in, she stumbled and fell onto the elevator floor. The elevator continued to move up while the girl's legs were still stuck between the two doors causing it to break.

The accident happened at Conch Building in Zhongshan West Road, Shanghai. You can see the whole accident scene in the video below (consider before watching).

This is not the first time an unfortunate accident has occurred due to lack of observation while using the phone. Hopefully, after reading this article, many of you will be aware of the serious harm of going and texting and giving up.

See more:

1. Fear of the Internet is bad for feng shui, cutting off 8 optical cable lines across the house, causing 8000 households to lose their lives

2. The best way for kids to stop using the phone

You finished reading the article "Losing a leg because I just pressed the phone and entered the elevator" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.

---