The Japanese manufacturer has just released its new generation of ultra-small laptops, codenamed MH380. With an elegant, impressive design, Fujitsu's goal is to be stylish and mobile-like young people because of their small and elegant style. Despite its compact design, the features and equipment inside MH380 are equally impressive.

Considering the total, MH380 is quite comprehensive, beautiful design, fashionable and powerful. Fujitsu insisted on not calling MH380 a netbook even though it was equipped with an Atom processor and a netbook-like design in style. They set up MH380 a separate segment that is Mini-notebook, Fujitsu does not want people to call MH380 netbooks because of the powerful features that MH380 owns, including HDD 250Gb, RAM. 2Gb, screen with LED backlight, multi-point mouse . and a new Intel Atom chip. The new generation of Atom chips using this Pine Trail platform will help increase machine performance while reducing the size of the processor because both graphics processing chipsets are also integrated into the processor. In addition, it is a processor with very low power consumption, very suitable for compact netbooks.

Fujitsu MH380 has a beautiful design and impresses users, the edges, corners are rounded soft instead of square rigid.
