

Microsoft allows users to install Windows Store applications on up to 2000 devices

If you have multiple Windows devices linked to your Microsoft account, you'll probably be happy to know that Microsoft is raising the device load limit of more than 20 times the current application.

If you have multiple Windows devices linked to your Microsoft account, you'll probably be happy to know that Microsoft is raising the device load limit of more than 20 times the current application.

Recently, Windows Central announced account level changes have been made with some Microsoft accounts, increasing the number of devices that you can install applications from the Windows Store to 20 times, from 10 to 2000. device.

However, not everyone needs to use up to 2000 devices but this new update will help you easily use multiple Windows 10 devices without worrying about limit this account account anymore.

This is indeed a welcome change for Microsoft Windows users.

1. Windows Store on Windows 10 is faulty, this is a fix
2. One of the best applications for Windows 10 is available on the Windows Store

You finished reading the article "Microsoft allows users to install Windows Store applications on up to 2000 devices" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.