Microsoft often likes to show the power of web browsing by demoing IE's graphics capabilities such as Video editing, graphics power experience, .

Today, in collaboration with Ubisoft, they launched the Assassin's Creed's Pirates test site on the browser.

With this demo, Microsoft hopes to make users rethink their IE browser with a new platform, not just a web browser. Compared to the previous demo screen, this time they did quite well in building a nice 3D graphics environment, but the actual test showed that both other browsers such as Chrome or Safari can run this website. Very smooth with all effects.
