

Microsoft began to order upgrade packages to Windows 8

Users can order an upgrade package of $ 15 right from the present time by providing the registration number as well as product information running Windows 7.

Users can order an upgrade package of $ 15 right from the present time by providing the registration number as well as product information running Windows 7.

It only costs 15 USD to upgrade from Windows 7 to Windows 8.

It was not until October 26 this year that the new Windows 8 operating system officially launched on the market but now, Microsoft has prepared quite " attentively " and takes care of its customers. In order for buyers not to freak out much about Windows 7 computer models, the US software company today introduced a website that allows registration of an operating system upgrade called Windows Upgrade Offer.

The previously announced upgrade fee is US $ 14.99 for all orders for a Windows 7 computer model from June 2, 2012 to January 31, 2013. Users need to provide 25 product codes of Windows 7 and from October 26, Microsoft will send confirmation sections to upgrade to the latest operating system.

American software company supports 131 markets around the world including Vietnam for this upgrade.

Previously, customers who were using Windows 7 Home Premium, Professional or Ultimate were reported to be able to buy Windows 8 Pro for only $ 15. After paying, updating to Windows 8 Pro will be completed at the same time Windows 8 officially released to the market, possibly in late October this year.

You finished reading the article "Microsoft began to order upgrade packages to Windows 8" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.
