

Microsoft claims the process of updating new Windows 10X features will be 'lightning fast'

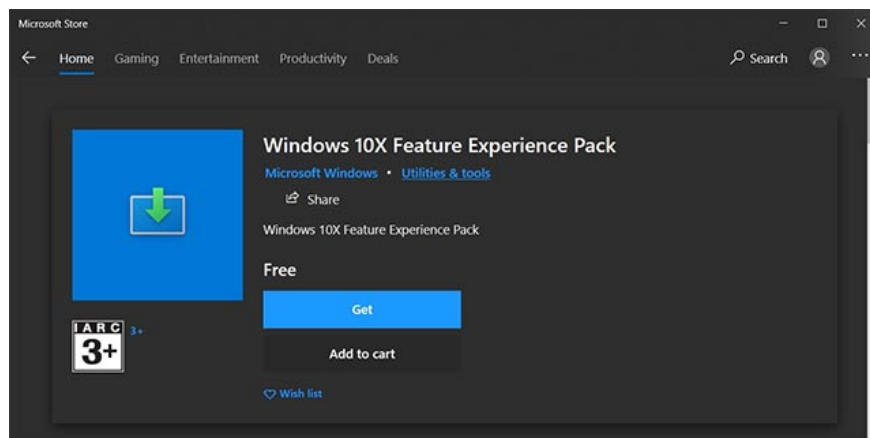

We can totally believe this will be one of the most perfect operating system platforms that Microsoft has ever created.

Windows 10X is a commendable effort by Microsoft to launch a new operating system, developed to provide maximum support as well as customized interface for dual screen devices. Actual experience shows that Windows 10X can be considered a variant of Windows 10 with a combination of phone and tablet experience. However, there will be interesting differences, such as in feature updates.

Microsoft confidently announces that Windows 10X will have a 'lightning-fast' feature update mechanism, in which new features will be sent as separate updates, the update process will take no longer than 90 seconds, and all will take place in the background to bring maximum convenience to the user.

More specifically about this innovation, Microsoft plans to provide new features for Windows 10X as separate downloads from the Microsoft Store, instead of the entire Windows Update package as it is available on Windows 10 today. We all know that updates on Windows 10 often take a long time to download, not to mention the time to reboot and install system updates . all of which will get you stuck in front of the screen. computer for dozens of minutes.

Redmond Company has just introduced a new application called Windows 10X Feature Experience Pack on Microsoft Store designed to optimize the feature update process on Windows 10X. This new approach can completely solve the concerns associated with update issues that often appear on Windows 10, besides the performance issues of updates.

Optimizing new feature updates as separate updates sounds simple, but in reality it requires quite a few core changes. For example, nearly all operating systems, drivers, and applications on Windows 10X will be isolated,

Microsoft just need to move them to an update after the system reboots.

Windows 10X is still in the early stages of development, and we can count on it to be one of the most perfect operating system platforms Microsoft has ever created.

You finished reading the article "Microsoft claims the process of updating new Windows 10X features will be 'lightning fast'" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.