

Microsoft Listas - Online 'Handbook' of Wiki format

Microsoft 's Live family has just launched a new member, Listas, a service that allows users to create and share various types of lists, styled by Wikipedia.

Microsoft 's Live family has just launched a new member, Listas, a service that allows users to create and share various types of lists, styled by Wikipedia.

Listas is not only for sharing list categories, it can also be used to share announcements, favorites lists or other types of public information. Like the way Wiki works, lists can be shared and published publicly, allowing the entire user group to edit information depending on the permissions that the creator set up.

Although only in the testing phase of technology, Microsoft Listas is also favored to add a toolbar for Internet Explorer browser, support users to select information from websites whether the search results, a good part whole website and put them on your personal list at Listas. Users can also subscribe to RSS feeds from lists shared by other members.

Listas interface to create shared list: very simple, good support Vietnamese.

The Listas interface is simple but users will need some time to get used to it. The layout of the modules is also clear, it is possible to search lists via tags, editors that support shortcuts.

" Users will easily use Listas for meeting notifications, bookmarks, shopping list, fun plans or anything they can create their own way, " the group said. Live Labs introduces Listas.

Listas has just released a test version, users can register and use their current Hotmail or MSN account here.

Thanh Truc

You finished reading the article "Microsoft Listas - Online 'Handbook' of Wiki format" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.

