

Microsoft Office iOS app has an important update, supports downloading PDF files for offline use

The popularity of Microsoft Office in the modern working environment makes the user's demand for this useful office suite have long gone beyond PC platforms.

Microsoft Office applications on current mobile operating systems have basically fully supported the necessary basic experiences, in order to serve the needs of users for quick interaction with documents in the following cases. certain use.

However, there is a useful feature, long requested but only now introduced by Microsoft in the Office applications for iOS and iPadOS, which is the ability to save PDF files to your device for access when you do not have them. Internet connection.

Accordingly, Microsoft has officially released a new update 2.55 for Office applications on iOS and iPadOS platforms. This update is basically not big, but it comes with an important feature, which is to support users to download PDF files to their device, so that they can freely access and use them even when the device is not working. in offline state. As mentioned, this is a long-awaited feature that, although small, can make a big impact in a positive way for users. The specific information listed in the Changelog of the new update is as follows:

If you do not know, this Office iOS application will combine all 3 tools Word, Excel and PowerPoint into a single application, which can be used quickly and conveniently. While ensuring to maintain all necessary functions of Word, Excel and PowerPoint individually. Besides, there are also new features such as voice input in Word, etc.

To get access to all the cool features, you can download the Office app on your iPhone or iPad from this link, or visit the App Store.

You finished reading the article "Microsoft Office iOS app has an important update, supports downloading PDF files for offline use" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.