

Microsoft plans to withdraw from tablet market?

If the postings are true, it seems that Microsoft has completely lost faith in the entire Surface tablet series.

If the postings are true, it seems that Microsoft has completely lost faith in the entire Surface tablet series.

Will Surface Pro 3 be Microsoft's last Surface member?

Microsoft had high expectations for the tablet and smartphone business, but the failure of the business of the first two generations of Surface made the software giant lose $ 1.7 billion. In the face of difficulties, Microsoft only dared to expect to produce less than 1 million Surface Pro 3 tablets with the target of business market.

A source from the supply chain, a report yesterday (9/10) said Microsoft is planning to give up its Surface tablet line. This comes after Microsoft's Surface Pro 3 sales were lower than expected.

Earlier, Microsoft was supposed to launch the Surface Mini at the same time as the Surface Pro 3 was introduced at the company's own recent event, but the lack of trust in the success of the product forced the company to cancel. the release of this version.

You finished reading the article "Microsoft plans to withdraw from tablet market?" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.