

Microsoft will launch a new Office application, preinstalled on Windows 10

Revealed in a press conference held on December 19, Microsoft unveiled a new Office application built on the Office.com website that has recently been refurbished recently. .

Revealed in a press conference that took place on December 19, Microsoft said it would launch a new Office application built on the Office.com website, which was newly refurbished during the time. recently Windows Insiders users will be able to start testing this new application from today. Microsoft also plans to pre-install Office applications on new Windows 10 devices starting next year.

As we all know, last year, Microsoft rebuilt Office.com to make it a 'starting point' for Microsoft Office users. And to this day, it can be affirmed that the company's strategy has achieved remarkable success. Share with reporters, Microsoft said that up to now, more than 40% of Office 365 users started their work by visiting Office.com. In addition, Microsoft will not hide its intention to bring similar experiences to the desktop in the future, improving the experience for Office 365 users, Office 2019, Office 2016 and Office Online on the desktop.

However, this intention of Microsoft is quite confusing because the Office application basically reflects only what Office.com has to offer, and Microsoft has an application called My Office, which helps users manage Their Office 365 subscriptions. The new Office application will replace the My Office application via automatic updates in the next few months, however, you can also download the new Office application from Microsoft Store.

Here are the advantages that users can benefit from the new Office application:

1. It is possible to quickly switch between applications, as well as see all your Office applications at every bow with just one click.
2. The ability to work flexibly, helps you get back to work quickly. With this new Office application, you can easily switch as well as access to the most recently used documents, pinned documents and shared documents, even if they are on your local computer. You are either stored in OneDrive or SharePoint.
3. Smart search ability. With Microsoft Search integrated in the new Office, you can quickly find the applications, documents, users and websites you need to get your work done and save time.
4. Support for organizational and business environment. Businesses can apply the company's brand and integrate other business applications through a single sign-on feature to customize the experience for their users.

To be fair, the first three items are not so outstanding. You can do all of this without going to Office using individual Office applications like Word, Excel, PowerPoint, etc.

However, the final advantage is that this is what Microsoft really wants to navigate towards when launching this new application, which is the business. Many large corporations have implemented the new Office.com, many office workers use it to retrieve the files they need when working remotely or on a computer that is not working. The new Office application promises to be well received in the enterprise-scale segment.

See more:

1. Microsoft launched 19H1 build 18305 for Windows 10 Insider on the Fast Ring
2. 4 desirable features on the new Windows 10 update 19H1
3. Experience new features of Windows 10 October (1809)
4. Windows 10 October 2018 Update and new highlights will appear

You finished reading the article "Microsoft will launch a new Office application, preinstalled on Windows 10" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.