

Microsoft works with Discord, connecting gamers to Xbox Live and Discord

Microsoft and Discord collaborate, allowing PC and Xbox users to connect to Discord accounts.

For gamers, connecting with friends is always indispensable. Many gamers around the world have used and loved Discord because thanks to Discord, they can easily chat and connect with friends in the game. Over the next few weeks, everything will become simpler and more convenient when friends on both PC and Console can connect together. You can simply imagine adding a social network account to your Xbox Live account.

This is part of an effort to 'give gamers lots of choices, how and where to play'.

Friends on Discord and Xbox can now connect with each other

Accordingly, users can choose to connect their Discord account to their Xbox account, making it easy to know what friends are playing. For example, playing Sea of Thieves on the Xbox, players can let friends on Discord know that and decide to use the Xbox and join them.

See more:

1. What is Discord and how to use it?
2. How to set up the Xbox One gaming console on Windows 10
3. Microsoft invites you to make your own Xbox One game

You finished reading the article "Microsoft works with Discord, connecting gamers to Xbox Live and Discord" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.

