

Mimicking human behavior, the hero dog saves earthworms from the hot road surface

A woman in Illinois shared a video about her dog because it had an unusual behavior of saving earthworms from the hot road.

1. Incredibly the Maryland bus driver read the newspaper when he was driving
2. Unexpected story: Wild dogs and foxes recognize the same species, frolic like brothers

A woman in Illinois shared a video about her dog because it had an unusual behavior of saving earthworms from the hot road.

The video was recorded between the hot weather in East St. Louis, showing Holliday, the name of the German shepherd dog gently gnawing on earthworms from asphalt to the cool lawn.

'While walking, Holliday circled the neighborhood, he discovered that the worm immediately rushed to the worms from the hot road to the cool grass so that it would not die . '

Watch video:

The owner of this dog gave a theory about how Holliday learned to save these worms. 'The dog has never been trained to teach this way, since it was a puppy. However, my mother has a habit of taking earthworms on hot asphalt and dropping them on land and cool grass'.

'I think Holliday has seen this scene many times, self-learning and doing it. It did this for about a year and a half '- the dog owner said.

You finished reading the article "Mimicking human behavior, the hero dog saves earthworms from the hot road surface" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.
