

Minecraft: Top 5 most terrible mobs in Minecraft as of 2022

Minecraft currently exists a multitude of different types of mobs to increase the liveliness of the game. Besides the pleasant mobs, there are of course quite a few extremely terrible mobs.

Currently, the number of mobs in Minecraft has reached 70, they are special AI entities that can interact with players in many different ways. In it, the difference in behavior and personality of mobs will be clearly shown, from scary bosses to friendly, cute mobs,.

And here are the top 5 most terrible mobs in the game as of 2022. Find out with MGN.vn!

Llama

Llamas are neutral mobs that can be found naturally in the Savanna and Windswept hill biomes. The player can tame them with wheat, and often these llamas will carry chests on them.

However, Donkey and La are the mobs that get much more attention to replace these camels because the player can also ride them. From here, the llamas are simply not as useful as there are better mob substitutes.

Silverfish

These are hostile mobs that spawn from an infected rock block or from a creature that spawns in The End. These little, cranky creatures cause nothing but annoyance to the player.

With its hitboxes, Silverfish is difficult to hit and will annoy players a lot. These are mobs that don't drop anything but a few XP points, so they're considered one of the worst creatures.

Ocelots

These are feral cats that live in the Jungle biome. They are larger than normal cats and have a distinct skin texture.

Notably, Ocelots cannot be tamed, although the player can gain their trust very easily by feeding them raw cod or salmon. In general, ordinary cats are much better than Ocelots because they can be tamed and become pets.

Polar bears

These are giant white and neutral mobs that live in the game's snow biome.

Polar bears breed as adults or may be accompanied by a baby. They do not play a major role in the game other than enhancing the biome. At the same time, Polar Bears are also considered hostile to the player when attacked or with a baby. This mob will drop live cod or salmon along with some XP.

Bats

Bats are considered the most terrible mob in Minecraft up to the present time. They spawn naturally in dark places like caves or at night and don't drop anything so are pretty useless for gamers. Basically, Bats are just there to enhance the atmosphere of a place!

According to information about version 1.19, some players have pointed out that the sound from Bats will help distract the new Warden mobs so they don't chase anymore. These are all in the future.

You finished reading the article "Minecraft: Top 5 most terrible mobs in Minecraft as of 2022" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.

