Women are happy - more miserable in their husbands, men are happy - more miserable in their behavior with their wives and children.

Today, the middle of the 21st century is full of modernity, society is always filled with feudal and old-fashioned thoughts like the idea of "housework is women's own business. Ancient people often say: "Military people stay away from the kitchen", and today, many gentlemen still use it as an excuse to never help and share housework with their wives and children.

There are no women who naturally have a desire to do housework without wanting free time for themselves. And of course, even more men who do not want to do housework but do not want to spend the night gathering with friends, tired, then go home to sleep on the bed to rest. All of us only do housework and therefore part of the obligation.

In fact, in a family, if the husband can actively do housework with his wife, the marriage relationship will become stronger and better. In contrast, a husband who never touches cooking or cleaning can lead to a high frequency of spousal bickering. This is the experience of a mother who has accumulated and witnessed for dozens of years of her life, now passing on to her daughter: "Instead of taking a rich, male billionaire every year, son Please choose a person who has enough bravery to dare to share the housework with me. "

Besides, she taught her son: "Then you will be a mature man. I hope then, I not only study successfully but also learn to care about the people around me. Don't just make your future happy, you also have to create a happy future for your partner later. My wife and many other girls out there are precious gems in their hands, The flower is carefully cared for, until it flourishes at its best, her parents give her decades of results to her without a complaint, so she will continue to take care of her. Will it be a person who will destroy her beauty with countless names of household chores alone? "

Today, the problem of men not doing housework still exists in most marriages. When pursuing women, they are willing to treat their lovers like a little princess, cherish and cherish. But after getting married, women become free maids and babysitters in the house. Many early wives turned off early in the morning to wake up, prepare rice for the whole day, take their children to school and then go to work, when they still have countless other cleaning jobs while their husbands just lie down. lazing on the sofa watching television. In the heart, men always assume that their responsibility is to earn money to support their families, and that the house is naturally a part of women's care obligations. However, marriage is the marriage of two people, the family is also the family of two people, so why is only one person responsible for doing housework? You are also the one who lives in this house, so you should also be the one who sweeps and wipes the house. You are also one of those people who use this bowl, so you are also obliged to wash the dishes. You are also part of this family, so you are also obliged to help with the work of the family. Whether you are a wife or a husband, a woman or a man, the responsibilities and responsibilities of each person in marriage need to be on the same level.

This society is treating too harshly for women. The wife in the family not only needs to share the economy with her husband, but also to make sure that she has to eat and take care of the family affairs on both sides and know how to take care of her own home. We forget that women are just humans. They have no esper powers, no three six-handed heads. They are willing to shoulder the family work, taking care of the house and husband's house is not simply volunteering, but also love. For that reason, all women feel happy when they eat a meal cooked by their husbands, when they enjoy a holiday where their husbands volunteer to move. Maybe the food is not good enough, maybe the house is not clean enough, but it is the husband who dares to voluntarily share the housework with the new wife as an act that makes her feel the love and respect of the husband. direction.

A marriage that wants to maintain happiness requires both husband and wife to understand, support and guide each other continuously. Whether it's economic, spiritual or family-oriented, if you both know how to share the difficulties together, the family will definitely be sustainable.
