Mozilla has just released the latest version of Firefox web browser on PC and on Android. With the desktop version, Firefox has allowed social networks to integrate deeper, while Firefox on Android has changed the look and style of fonts to make web content easier to read.

Firefox 21 for PC allows integration of social networking applications

Users can download the free version of Firefox 21 here .

Mozilla first introduced the Social API (programming interface) on Firefox 17 in November last year, through this API, allowing integration of social networking applications right into the web browser. Firefox.

Specifically, from the version of Firefox 17, users can set up to chat with friends on Facebook and monitor all updates on this social network from anywhere on the Firefox web browser.

Now, with the official release of Firefox 21, support for social networks Cliqz, Mixi and msnNow.

In which Mixi is a very popular social network in Japan, Cliqz is a social network that provides updates and videos that users love. MsnNow will automatically scan information sources from Facebook, Twitter, Bing and BreakingNews.com in real time to provide users with the latest news and information.

With the new API in Firefox 21, users can easily turn on / off social networking applications integrated into Facebook easily. For example, with Facebook, users can access it here using the Firefox web browser, then click the ' Turn on' button to activate the Facebook chat function right on Firefox.

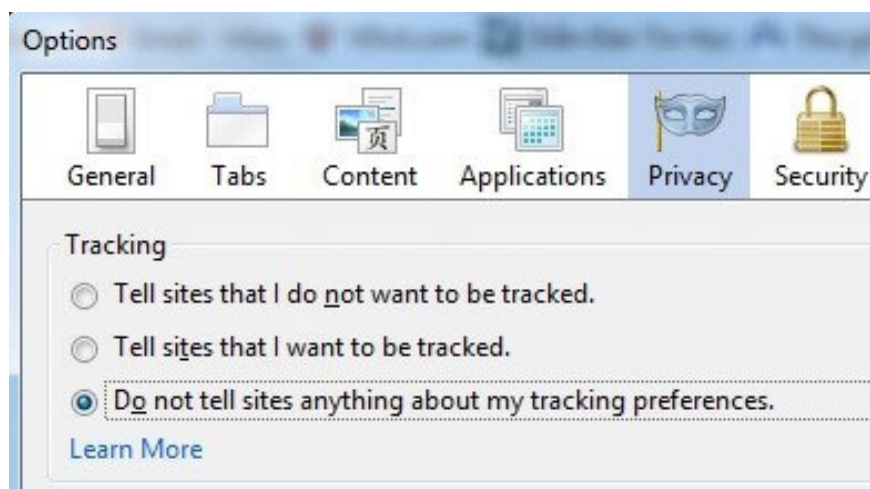

Integrate the function of updating information from msnNow right on Facebook

With Cliqz, users can access here , press the 'Active cliqz' button to activate Facebook integration. With msnNow, users can access it here , press the 'Turn in on' button to integrate into Facebook.

'Mozilla developed the social API (Social API) interface to allow social network providers to integrate directly into the Firefox web browser, to help users' browsing experience become social. , more variable and more personalized,' Mozilla said.

In addition to the above changes, Firefox 21 is also equipped with the third option in the 'Do not Track' feature, which does not want the site to track user activity. With this 3rd option, the 'Do Not Track' feature will still be activated in Firefox, but the website will not know that this feature is running in Firefox.

To set your preferences, 'Privacy' in the Options window, then check 'Do not tell site anything about my tracking preferences'.

In addition, Firefox 21 also has some feature changes, such as allowing users to restore a thumbnail of a web page on Firefox's new tab page if the user has just deleted the site, or charged 'Firefox Health Report' feature will automatically send Mozilla anonymous information (to keep users secret) errors encountered during use, so that Mozilla has a reasonable upgrade solution in sessions next version .

In terms of performance, Firefox 21 retains impressive performance and browsing. In particular, Mozilla has designed to help Firefox automatically optimize memory to help Firefox boot faster or run more smoothly .

Firefox 21 for Android - Impressive change

If Firefox 21 on the PC doesn't have too many changes, Firefox 21 on the Android mobile platform has changed quite impressively.
