

Naomi Gleit senior director of Facebook, a person who is willing to do everything including cleaning toilets

At Facebook, there was an extremely famous female director who was always willing to do everything for the company and her colleagues, even though she was cleaning the toilet, she always happily agreed. That wonderful woman is Naomi Gleit.

Speaking of Facebook, we often think of their founder Mark Zuckerberg. But, apart from Mark, for Facebook to grow as it is today, it is impossible not to mention the leaders and employees who are always devoted to the development of this social network.

At Facebook, there was an extremely famous female director who was always willing to do everything for the company and her colleagues, even though she was cleaning the toilet, she always happily agreed. That wonderful woman is Naomi Gleit.

Naomi Gleit is a senior director of Facebook, responsible for exploiting users, finding positive social aspects to make Facebook an indispensable tool for any individual. In order for Facebook to develop more, she and her team to develop social benefits also launched the Amber Alerts feature to find children with safety and the application to safely notify Safety Checks for users who are available at the possible locations Life-threatening features.

Gleit shared with Recode: "I will do everything with them. If they tell me to clean the bathroom, I will also say" Okay. "

Although this will never happen to a beautiful and talented director like this. But with his enthusiasm, Gleit always has a ready mentality, focusing on his mission. Perhaps this is a common feature of many technology directors in general and Facebook directors in particular. This psychological trait is also a factor to keep them at the company, even if the company has experienced many recent events.

Facebook currently has 9 senior directors who are still staying with the company, who have worked overtime for more than 9 years. In 2018, Facebook had to say goodbye to two directors.

Most recently, CEO of WhatsApp, Mr. Jan Koum left the company because he disagreed with the advertising business model of this social network. Koum joined Facebook's highest ranks in 2014, when Facebook acquired WhatsApp encrypted messaging service.

Recently, after the fact that many stolen Facebook accounts have been rumored by the press, the directors in the company have faced a lot of scrutiny, causing many skeptics to question whether Are personnel in Facebook closely monitored? Shareholders, lawmakers, and Facebook users all want to have transparency in Facebook's decisions. They also specifically criticized Mark Zuckerberg in recent times.

Facebook executives say the company has not done enough to cut down abusive behaviors on the platform, and they will bring changes to the security policy of future social networks.

Gleit shared: "In the end, you can't give up your family."
