HP has launched a netbook called Compad Mini 700 with a 10.2-inch screen, beautifully designed and configured like other netbooks.

This is the first netbook HP has two brands HP and Compad (previously HP only). Mini 700 is equipped with Atom Intel processor, 60 GB HDD. Compared to some other netbooks like the Mini 1000 and the Vivienne Tam 1000 Special Edition Mini, the two previous models use SSD 8 and 16 GB solid-state drives.

Mini 700 has 1 GB RAM, integrated webcam, microphone, memory card reader, two USB ports. In addition, the current version has a 3-cell battery, Wi-Fi connectivity, Bluetooth and HSDPA. It runs on Windows XP operating system, priced at 594 USD.

Here are some real photos of HP Compad Mini 700.

The screen of the Mini 700 is 10.2 inches, resolution is 1,204 x 600 pixels.

This is the first netbook branded Compaq.

Wide keyboard, out to the edge.

The Compaq logo is outside the box.

Outside moon lines are similar to HP laptops.

The device has a 3-cell battery.

The touchpad is wide and easy to use compared to most netbooks available in the market.
