

New stickers on Instagram allow asking to participate in live chat in Stories

Instagram has just added the latest Stories stickers, allowing Instagram account owners to ask their followers to join the new group chat in Stories.

Instagram has just added the latest Stories sticker set, which allows Instagram account owners to ask their followers to join the new group chat in Stories, as well as allow the poster postman to choose those accounts can participate in that conversation.

This new feature is called chat sticker, combined with a variety of other sticker types that Instagram introduced in Stories, including exploration stickers, question and answer, mentions, locations. , hashtag, countdown and a few other small features, gives Instagram users almost full of useful utilities right in Stories.

1. Instagram surfing sees ads exactly right, they say it's just "random" or at the user

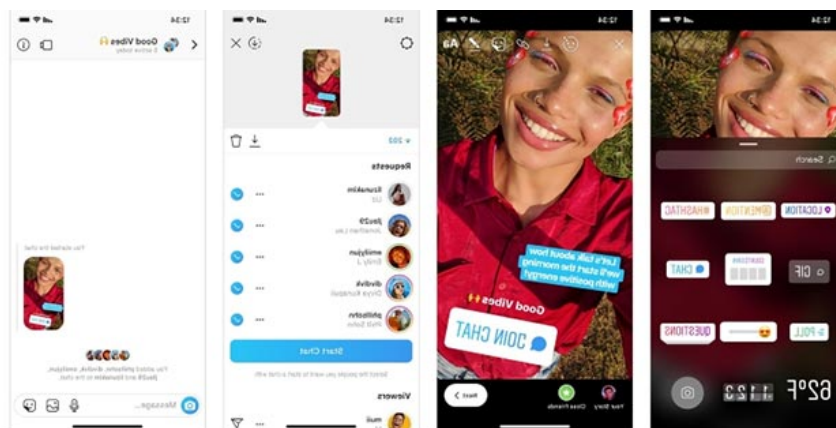

Just click on the sticker to request to join the chat group

In essence, chat stickers are a relatively simple feature, and Instagram is positioning it as a convenient solution for those who want to quickly create a large group chat on any topic right in Stories without having to share new posts, or to plan between a certain group of people.

If you put a chat sticker in your Stories post, friends or followers can tap it to request access to the chat group. The request to participate in the conversation will be sent directly to your inbox, at which point you have full authority to grant or deny participation requests. Besides, you can also end this conversation at any time.

This feature seems to be designed specifically for people who need to interact with their real friends on Instagram. Of course, many followers of Instagram accounts can also use this feature to quickly start a conversation with their fans, but the conversation will be quite chaotic and difficult to control. Especially when the number of people requesting to join the chat group is too large, the 'single' browsing also takes a lot of time.

1. 49 million Instagram users leak personal information, mostly celebrities

"Application" participating in the chat group will be browsed in the inbox

Overall, this type of chat is still best suited for moderate chat groups, where friends share content with each other and talk about what they love and care about.

You finished reading the article "New stickers on Instagram allow asking to participate in live chat in Stories" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.