

Only with an impressive designed CV, this guy has been recruited straight away without an interview

If you want to get the attention of employers, find out carefully about the company you want to be employed, invest time to design impressive CV so that you can become more outstanding. with other candidates

When the labor market becomes fierce battles between candidates, what you need to do is take advantage of every possible opportunity to make employers pay attention to your profile. This is also what Jennifer Little-Fleck from The Daily Muse - a website that provides useful job know-how and career orientation.

Sumukh Mehta is a 21-year-old boy who just graduated from college and dreams of someday going to work in GQ (Gentlemen's Quarterly) - a leading men's magazine, reflecting fashion and style. Ways and culture through articles about food, movies, gender, music, travel, sports, technology and books.

Although he was just out of school, Sumukh Mehta clearly showed himself to be a very creative guy. Instead of writing CV in the traditional way, he took the time to learn everything about GQ, including corporate culture, products, work environment, people ., and study thoroughly. about employment trends as well as employers' markets. After that, Sumukh Mehta focused on designing a bold "GQ" version of CV from colors, images, and fonts to highlight his experiences, skills, and qualifications. Looking at this CV, you will definitely feel like you are a representative model for Magazine cover.

Immediately after completion, Sumukh Mehta was very pleased with his product and sent the file to 3 GQ headquarters located in 3 countries: Mumbai, London and New York.

Just a few days later, GQ's London recruitment board sent a job offer to Sumukh Mehta without asking for any interviews.

"I really want to work at GQ, because I dream of working in a place where I can use Marketing knowledge in the most creative way possible" - Sumukh Mehta.

In fact, such a unique and strange style of CV design does not always satisfy employers. This depends on the area of activity, company culture and many other factors. However, with GQ, Sumukh Mehta's creativity is obviously a commendable idea breakthrough. Not only does he show that he is a person who has thoroughly learned about the business, but has a real ability but with a "GQ Style" CV, he also asserts that he is a true "GQ Staff".

If you want to get the attention of employers, find out carefully about the company you want to be employed, invest time to design impressive CV so that you can become more outstanding. with other candidates. Just do your best and believe in what you are doing, surely luck will smile at you.

You finished reading the article "Only with an impressive designed CV, this guy has been recruited straight away without an interview" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.