

OS X Mountain Lion can be sold on July 25

Apple is rumored to have asked employees to work 24/7 to install a new operating system on every computer in stores in the US and other countries.

Apple is rumored to have asked employees to work 24/7 to install a new operating system on every computer in stores in the US and other countries.

OS X Mountain Lion can be sold from July 25th. (Photo: 9to5Mac).

9to5Mac said, "Apple" has just asked employees at Apple Store stores in the US as well as other countries to prepare to work 24/7 soon. This move is to prepare for the event that OS X Mountain Lion was officially released on the morning of July 25 next day.

If this rumor is true, OS X Mountain Lion will not be introduced with any of these products this year. 9to5Mac sources said that employees at Apple Store this year are also fewer people and their job is to install a new operating system on all the computers in the store.

Earlier, "Apple" also released OS X Mountain Lion the Golden Master version to all developers. This shows that the latest version of Apple's operating system development is almost complete.

OS X 10.8 Mountain Lion was introduced by Apple earlier this year. This product is expected to be sold for $ 19.99 on the Mac App Store online app store.

You finished reading the article "OS X Mountain Lion can be sold on July 25" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.
