

Panasonic launches a laptop 'hole' running Ivy Bridge chip in Japan

Let's Note B11 with Core i7-3615QM chip, 15.6 inch screen with Full HD resolution priced from 2,100 to 3,100 USD depending on the configuration.

Let's Note B11 with Core i7-3615QM chip, 15.6 inch screen with Full HD resolution priced from 2,100 to 3,100 USD depending on the configuration.

Let's Note B11 has a starting price of about 2,100 USD.

Panasonic has just introduced Let's Note B11 laptop model using Ivy Bridge chip in Japan. As expected, this product will have a selling price ranging from 170,000 to 250,000 yen (about 2,100 to 3,100 USD).

The screen of the device is 15.6 inches in size and Full HD resolution. Let's Note B11 uses Core i7-3615QM chip with 4GB RAM. In addition, B11 is also equipped with 640GB HDD. However, users can choose to upgrade RAM to 8GB and 256GB SSD.

See more photos of Panasonic official Note Note B11.

Let's Note b11 uses Core i7-3615QM chip

The product has a pit design.

Users can choose to upgrade 8GB RAM and 256GB SSD.

You finished reading the article "Panasonic launches a laptop 'hole' running Ivy Bridge chip in Japan" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.

