

Photos of the first days of football appeared in the US

Photos of the early days of football appeared in the US from 1902 to 1924.

American football was first developed in the United States, rooted in football and rugby sports.

The first football match was held on November 6, 1869, between two teams: Rutgers and Princeton, regulating the timing of each match. In the second half of the 1870s, the universities that organized football all switched to rugby - allowed to carry the ball.

The revised law was drafted from 1880 onwards by Walter Camp - "Father of American Football" - that each team has 11 players and rules for the football field. The revised regulation then legitimized the forward links, created a neutral zone and detailed rules about the size and lineup in football.

We found this collection of photos in the Library of Congress Library archive - photos of the first American football players and football matches.

1920s

1912

In the United States, American football is called "football" and the term "football" is officially used in the book on the season of 1876.

The first sport moved the rules from football to rugby, although it could easily be called "rugby" at the time. Harvard University is one of the first schools to have a rugby match proposal, adjust and not require the name of the sport to be changed to "rugby".

English-speaking countries often disseminate common football rules such as the United Kingdom, Ireland, Canada, New Zealand, and Australia. The term "football pitch" or "American football" is widely used.

1920s

1922

The first professional football match took place in the United States on November 12, 1892, when player William "Pudge" Heffelfinger was paid $ 500 to play for a tournament between the Allegheny Athletics Federation and the track and field club. Pittsburgh .

This is the first case of a player being paid to participate in an " American football " match. Although the 1880s there were many sports clubs created to help players with jobs, win a cup or get double the cost. Out-of-game benefits have an important meaning for amateur players at that time and direct payment of remuneration to players is supported, if not illegal.

1924

A University of Pennsylvania player. 1910

Brown University football player Theodore Chandler in 1910

Fighting between Brown University and Cornell University in 1914

Over a long period of time, professional players have become more and more popular and they have unpredictable moves as well as illegal remuneration for players who are still studying at universities. learn. National Football League (NFL) - was founded by a group of professional teams of American Professional Football League since 1920 to solve problems.

New goals are set for the federations, including betting between players, prohibiting the use of players at universities and the abolition of paying players to leave the other team. . In 1922, the National Football League was organized by the top professional football federations before.

1921

Player C. Wertz.of Georgetown University in 1918

Georgetown University player John Thornton in 1918

The Battle of the Army - Navy at the Polo base in New York in 1916

American football is the most popular sport in the United States, professional football and college football are the most popular types of play in this sport, depending on the different levels of play in high schools and young football. As of 2012, there are nearly 1.1 million high school athletes and 70,000 college athletes participating in the sport each year.

National Football League - the most famous football league in the US, has the largest number of participants compared to any sports league in the world. The Super Bowl - the Super Bowl - is among the most viewed sporting events in the world and the federation has an annual turnover of about $ 10 billion.

You finished reading the article "Photos of the first days of football appeared in the US" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.

---