June 17 is the time when Adobe officially sold Photoshop a new version called Creative Cloud, released on a subscription form online, with a subscription fee of $ 20 / month (if you have CS3 versions available). onwards will be discounted to $ 10 / month.

So since this release, we will no longer have Photoshop CS7 , but instead will be Photoshop CC Instant Creative Cloud .

Adobe expects this subscription-based business model to help them reduce millions of dollars of losses by using pirated software.

Currently the Adobe CS5 and CS6 applications are being used extensively, and it is enough to meet our needs for at least a few years.

However, if you love the new version and want to support copyright, we still have the right to buy Adobe Creative Cloud, with subscription fee of 50 USD / month for the entire application or 20 USD / month for each individual application, This is the price not reduced.

Will you give money to support Adobe with their Creative Cloud?
