Knowing Where to Play

The first step in finding your ideal gaming equilibrium is to choose whether to play on the web or in a physical casino. Both options have pros and cons, and it's up to you to decide which one serves your needs.

So, what can you expect to get with these different settings?

Gaming in land-based casinos can be limited. Retail venues often have issues with floor space, building codes, and personnel, which can restrict on-site gaming options. However, many players relish the atmosphere of the casino. They enjoy the act of sitting down to laugh and joke with tablemates, and trips to casino cities can provide a much-needed excuse to relax in a luxury hotel or get out and see the sights—something you can't really do when playing online.

Of course, web-based providers offer their fair share of benefits as well. Online casinos generally provide more gaming options than land-based venues, since they aren't limited by space and staffing issues in the same way that physical casinos are.

Furthermore, much of their resources go into developing new games, allowing them to branch out with different variants and fresh twists on old favorites. If you enjoy variety, playing online may be the best option for you. But if you do choose to go this route, make sure to pick your casino provider wisely.

It's a good idea to play at a reputable casino that has a full range of traditional games like roulette, video poker, and blackjack, as well as additional gaming variants to keep your interest piqued.

Established online Casinos like 888 Casino offer all the standard options, but you'll also be able to find more unique choices like Super Stakes Roulette, Multi-Hand Blackjack, huge selection of thrilling slots and the jewel in the crown, their assortment of live casino games with real authentic dealers. That way, you can stick to the basics if you like or go for something new if you're feeling adventurous.

Understanding the Odds

Before you decide which game to play, make sure you know the house edge and your odds of winning.

Once you've decided where you want to play, the next step is deciding what to play. To find the most profitable games, you need to know the house edge of each one and understand your odds of winning.

The house edge is basically the casino venue's advantage. It is shown as a percentage value and represents the percentage of money that the casino will win out of all the money bet on a particular game. Keep in mind that the house edge may vary depending on the house's specific rules and the variant of the game being played.

For example, the house edge of American roulette is 5.26%, meaning that the casino will win back 5.26% of all the money bet in a session. However, you can enhance your odds of winning by changing the roulette variation. European roulette has a smaller wheel that doesn't include the double zero, so your odds of winning are actually bigger—in fact, the house edge goes down to 2.7%.

If you want to know more, see below for a list of average house edge percentages:

Game	House Edge
Blackjack	Ranges from 0.28% to 0.5%
Craps	1.14% (Pass/Come) 1.36% (No Pass/No Come) 0% (Odds Bets)
Hold 'em Poker	2.19%
Roulette	2.70% (European Roulette) 5.26% (American Roulette)

Slots	Ranges from 2% to 25%
Baccarat	1.06% (Banker's Hand) 1.24% (Dealer's Hand)

So, how can you manage your bankroll effectively while playing casino games?

First, you need to determine your bankroll limit. Your limit is the amount of money you set aside to play with, and you should consider it an investment into your entertainment budget. Your limit can be as high or as low as you want, but it should be an amount you're comfortable with losing.

Put enough money in your bankroll so you won't have to top it off when it runs out, as you can quickly lose track of extra cash going in—and you want to have a handle on exactly how much you spend. Depending on if you're playing online or in person, you could create a spreadsheet on the computer or jot down your bets in a notebook to help yourself keep track.

As you're playing, be sure to size your bets according to your bankroll. It might be fun to walk into a casino and bet everything in one go, but you could be walking out five minutes later if you lose.

To avoid going home early, make conservative bets. You'll be able to play for longer and you won't be risking as much. A good rule of thumb is to only bet 1% of your bankroll at any given time. So, if you walk in with a bankroll of $100, make $1 wagers each time you bet.

There are, of course, no hard-and-fast rules. Having a good time is the most important thing, so choose an amount you like and play around with it. Eventually, you'll find what serves you and your bankroll best.

Snagging Casino Comps

Catch casino comps to extend your stay at the casino with free rooms, free food, and other sweet rewards.

Besides good bankroll management, you can use comps to help prolong your stay at a casino. Comps are complimentary services and goods that casinos give out to customers who frequent their establishments and can come in the form of free drinks, hotel stays, food, entertainment packages, and more. If you play smart, you can get comps like these for yourself.

So, how do they work? You don't have to spend outrageously, but you do have to establish yourself as a valuable customer. If you vacation often, use the same venue each trip so that the casino recognizes your loyalty, and buy package deals so you're doing all your spending in one place.

Sign up for a casino's rewards program and use a player's card to help the venue track your spending. Remember that casinos are much more likely to give out comps to players who spend more time on the gaming floor. To increase your floor time, play leisurely and pick slow-moving table games rather than games like slots which end quickly.

If you're ready to have some real casino fun, you're on the right track. Whether you're gaming online or in person, you've got all the tools you need to play like a real professional—so why not get started today? After all, the casino is waiting for you.
