On 23h last night, Microsoft officially allowed to download the first preview version of Windows 10 (also called the Windows Technical Preview). This is the version for programmers, ordinary users as well as business customers who want to preview Windows 10 will be better to optimize it for the server system as well as write the running software be on Windows 10.

There will definitely be errors, so you should consider carefully when installing it on your computer, do not install as the main operating system because the application is not compatible and the error will make you uncomfortable. The installation is released as ISO, so you can install it easily on your computer or on your virtual machine.

First, you should register for the Windows Insider Program here , after registering for membership, you will be notified of updates and the latest preview of Windows as soon as Microsoft is released. However, you must provide your comments and reviews to Microsoft.
